Andrea D. Morales

Andrea D. Morales (1995, Sevilla). She studied history in the University of Sevilla, where she majored in the Middle Ages, more specifically in gender history in al-Andalus.

After completing the master's degree in teacher training in secondary education and baccalaureate, she currently works as a professor of historical documentation at the School of Youth Literature for Writers.

The Bastard Duchess NEW!

The latest novel by rising historical fiction star Andrea D. Morales, whose previous titles have sold more than 30.000 copies.

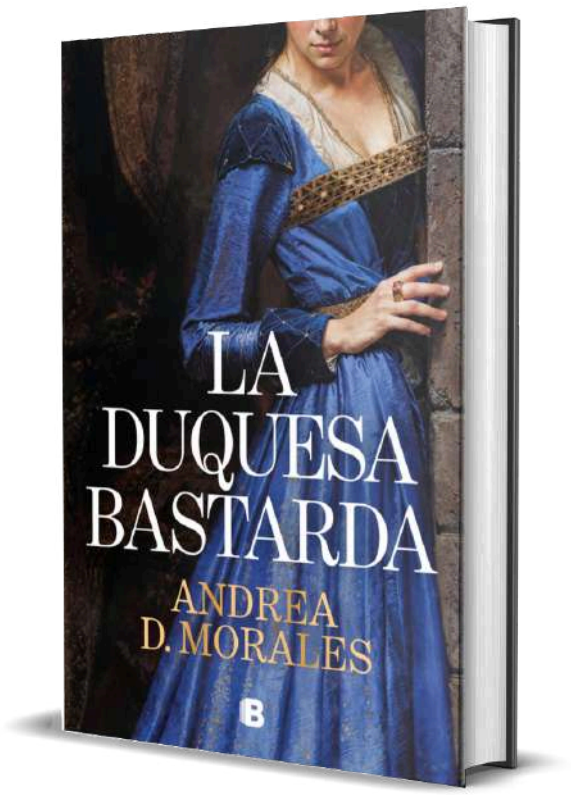
The perfect mix of court-mystery driven historical fiction and Rebecca

Through a plot woven with secrets, alliances, and betrayals, The Bastard Duchess tells of a female power operating from the shadows and of those women who fought their own wars behind castle walls.

1275, Mathilde, the illegitimate daughter of a French count, leaves her homeland after marrying Don Pedro de Lara, a powerful duke of the Kingdom of Castile. The young woman leaves behind the refined French court to immerse herself in her husband's dark and cold castle, from which he will soon depart for war.

Barely speaking a word of Spanish, Mathilde is left alone in the immense and luxurious stone halls, watched over by the elderly dowager duchess and her sinister servants, while she begins to feel how the shadow of Don Pedro's former wife—who died under strange circumstances—starts to loom over her.

Massive launch from Ediciones B



"It combines the best of historical novels: thrilling stories and the discovery of a fascinating past we had forgotten." - LUIS ZUECO

Pol Gise

Pol is a writer, actor and content creator specialized in mythology.

With his humorous works and a present day language he makes mythology get to all publics and shows different perspectives to myths we all thought we knew.
He has more than 3 million followers in social media and amongst his videos two series, "Salseo Griego" and "Salseo Bíblico, stand out with millions of views.

Troy NEW!

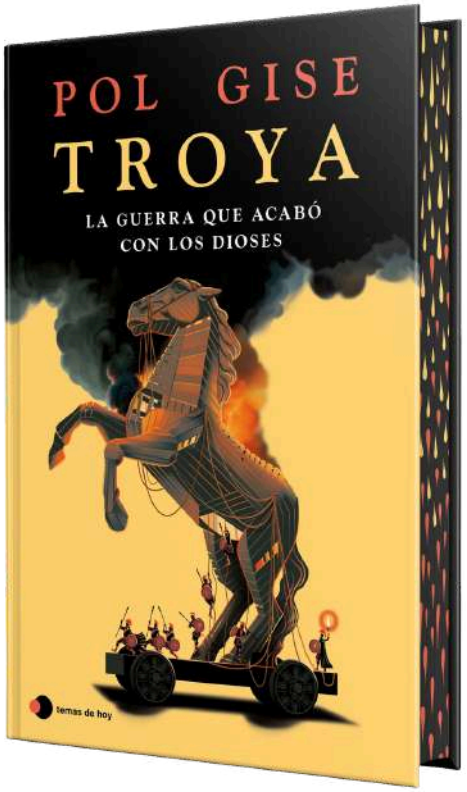
The conclusion to the highly successful Antrhopos cycle.

With more than 30.000 copies sold, Pol Gise has become a leading voice in mythology in the spanish speaking market.

The Trojan War has been at the core of imagination for centuries.

There was a time when gods and humans fought their battles separately. But there was one city that plunged the gods into an inevitable fate. When Queen Helen of Sparta is abducted by Prince Paris of Troy, tens of thousands of men leave behind their families and their homeland to fulfill an oath they will regret for the rest of their lives. But they will not be the only ones. On Mount Olympus, a deep rift emerges between supporters of one side and the other, leading the gods to dangerously meddle in the affairs of mortals. But can anyone emerge victorious from the bloodiest war ever witnessed?

On a battlefield where every death is a treasure, love and hate take hold of men's hearts, sparking new wars within each of them. Only a warrior named Achilles—and the fury of his love—can mark a turning point.



What sparked the Trojan War? Or who? In this ensemble novel, narrated by several of the protagonists of this timeless myth, Pol Gise concludes the Anthropos duology with a reimagining of the Trojan War brimming with epic grandeur and passion.

The silence of the righteous

NEW!

A sweeping historical novel about the Spanish Schindler: the man who stood against the horrors of Nazism and saved the lives of thousands of innocent Jews.

Bestselling author of The stolen lives and Ink and ashes.

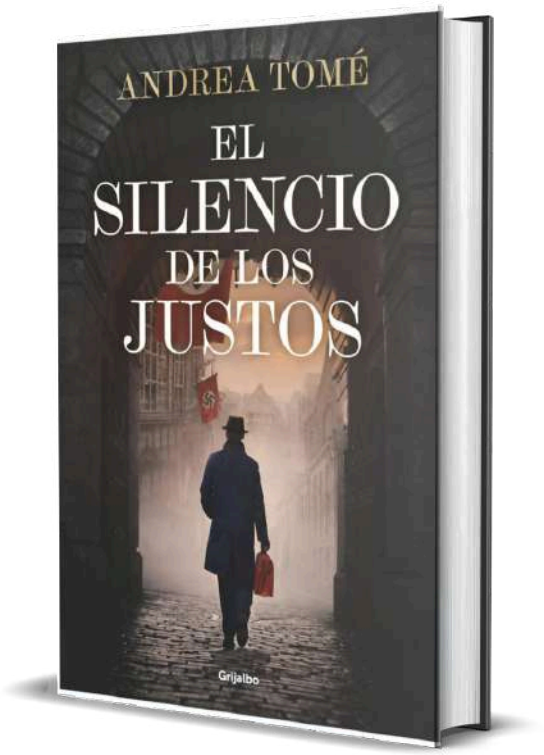
Budapest, 1944.
Following the German occupation, Hungary becomes a deadly trap for hundreds of thousands of Jews. Their fate depends on a race against time as three lives become intertwined by a single purpose: to save as many people as possible.
A friendship torn apart by war. When the conflict erupted, Ádám Farkas, an officer in the Hungarian Army, helped his best friend, Jonatán, escape to Palestine. Three years later, Jonatán has trained as a paratrooper and is determined to return to a Europe consumed by war.
A document that could change the course of history. Ádám and Jonatán's paths cross once more on a mission where every second counts: to deliver the Auschwitz Report, the first definitive account exposing the mass extermination taking place in the Nazi death camps.
The Angel of Budapest. Ángel Sanz Briz, a young Spanish diplomat newly arrived in the city, realizes that his role is not to bear arms, but to use the tools at his disposal to fight evil. Through extraordinary courage and determination, he will save more than five thousand Jews from certain death.



Andrea Tomé delves into one of the most difficult moments of our recent history and crafts a beautiful tale of strength and dignity.

The toy store

NEW!

Elena Peña

Elena Peña Bilbao was born in Bilbao in 1981. She studied art history, but since she was little she knew that her passion was writing. She published some poems and stories in different literary magazines. Later on, she studied screenwriting and worked as a scriptwriter for fiction series for eight years.

After that, she decided to study cooking, something she is also passionate about, and to write a young adult trilogy: Las revueltas.

She continues on sharing her poems in her Instagram account and is about to publish her new novel Si el agua nos lleva.

With deeply moving prose, Elena Peña Bilbao crafts a beautiful novel about friendship, memory, and nostalgia. Because we all carry within us a place where childhood remains untouched. And sometimes, all it takes is returning there to remember who we once were.

Madrid, 1963. Standing before the display window of the most iconic toy store on Gran Vía, Inés dreams of stepping inside the place that fills children with wonder and adults with nostalgia. More than anything, though, she longs to hold a doll like the one owned by her neighbor Candela, the granddaughter of the store's owner. But little Inés knows that this world does not belong to her—she is only the daughter of the building's caretakers.

When their paths cross, the two girls forge a bond as unexpected as it is unbreakable. Their friendship finds refuge in that toy store over the course of several decades, as they face family secrets, complicated romances, and the tensions of a country shaped by repression and injustice. Because there are places you know you can always return to, and dreams that, like the toys of childhood, never truly leave your side.

TWO FRIENDS. ONE TOY STORE.
A nostalgic journey back to childhood and the toys that shaped our lives.

The beast of Ándara

NEW!

The new novel by bestselling author of The night the bells rang.

Set in Cantabria, this serial killer investigation combines myth, legend and romanic art.

Atmospherical and a page turner.

A year after losing her temper and threatening a colleague with her gun, Macarena Lago returns to the Central Unit following a forced leave of absence and a divorce, determined to prove that she is still the best profiler. Her chance comes in Cantabria, in the heart of the Picos de Europa, where a second artist has been found dead amid Romanesque churches and wintry landscapes: everything points to the work of a serial killer.

In a region steeped in superstitions—starting with the legend of the Bear of Ándara—Macarena will clash with the stern Captain Laura Lavalle, while a disturbing symbolic game turns the investigation into a macabre puzzle. Together, they'll wage a race against time to prevent further murders and must confront not only a psychopath but also the dark side that both of them try to hide.

There are two words no investigator wants to hear: "serial killer"

Ash heroes NEW!

An epic adult fantasy blending the courtly intrigue of Game of Thrones, the emotional depth of a sweeping historical novel, and a love story powerful enough to transcend death and defy destiny.

Court intrigue, betrayal, duels, secret alliances, and rebellion collide in a world where youth can be a curse, magic hides behind politics, and love may be older than death itself.

IDrislán Delós has no ambition to be a hero. A twenty-five-year-old farmer, he wants nothing more than a quiet life, to care for his family, and, like everyone else, witness the arrival of the imperial court in Grensai. But when the emperor appears before the crowd, something inexplicable awakens within him. A memory that isn't his. An ancient voice. A name that could cost him his life.

Everyone kneels. He doesn't.

His defiance lands him in a prison cell, until Ailía of Arian, the emperor's granddaughter, secures his release and urges him to flee to the neighboring kingdom of Rothur.

"Your life is in danger," she tells him.

Ailía is convinced that Drislán is the reincarnation of the man she once loved, reborn to reclaim a lost crown and challenge the empire's rule.

From that moment on, Drislán becomes the target of a relentless manhunt.

A passion project from the bestselling author of "The cook of Castamar" that sold over 100.000 copies and was translated into 12 languages.

The perfect boyfriend

NEW!

Dark romcom with a thriller twist.

Morally gray characters.

Perfect girl v. suspected murderer.

A fun page turner that will delight readers of romances and light thrillers.

Julia and Tirso are an ordinary couple. Well, actually, Julia is the ordinary one. Tirso is more like a human 4x4, with barrel-sized arms and the kind of irresistible dimple that could make anyone lose their mind. As far as Julia is concerned, he has the two essential qualities of the perfect boyfriend: he's gorgeous, and he's genuinely kind.

Then Julia sees Tirso stuffing a body into the trunk of his car. Or at least something that looks an awful lot like one. Her first instinct is to convince herself that the love of her life couldn't possibly be a murderer... but a small part of her can't let it go. After all, nobody can really be that perfect, can they?

"Touch her, and you're dead."
Love is in the details. So is the devil.

Splendour

NEW!

Jordi Corominas

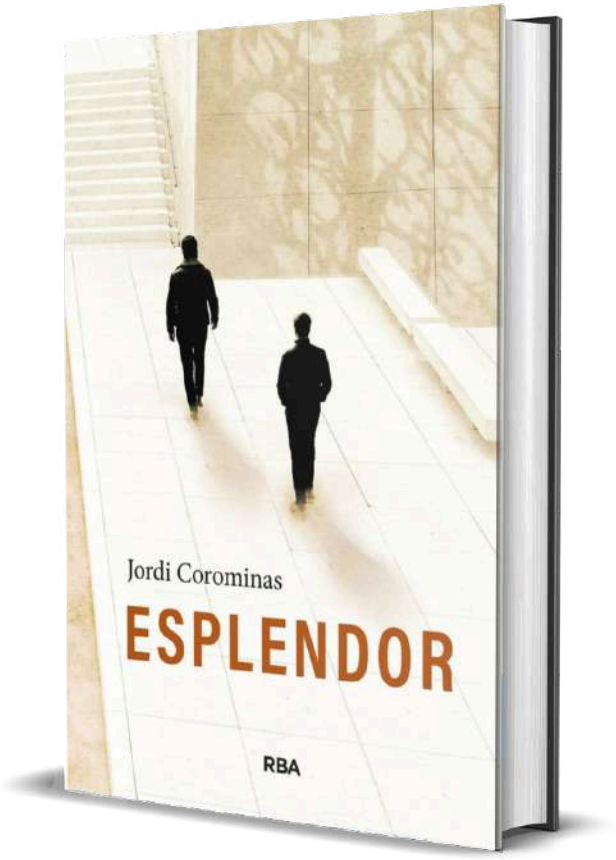
Jordi Corominas (Barcelona, 1979) is a writer and journalist specialising in European culture, literature and urban history. With a degree in Humanities and a Master's in History, he works across journalism, radio and cultural outreach, contributing to some of Spain's leading media outlets. He is also the host of the podcast 15 al día and has developed multidisciplinary cultural projects with an international reach.

A moving story of friendship, memory and coming of age, set against the transformation of Barcelona at the end of the 20th century.

Blurring the boundaries between memoir and fiction, Splendour recreates a vanished city through the friendship between two men from different generations.

Barcelona, late 20th century. As the city transforms around them, two men from different generations forge a friendship through books, bars, endless conversations and aimless walks.

Years later, revisiting those days means recovering not only a friendship, but the intimate map of a Barcelona that has disappeared. Blending memoir and fiction, Splendour is a story of friendship, loss and sentimental education—and an exploration of what remains of us when time has carried almost everything away.



A city changes.
A friendship remains.

The shadow of Agamemnon

David Ortiz

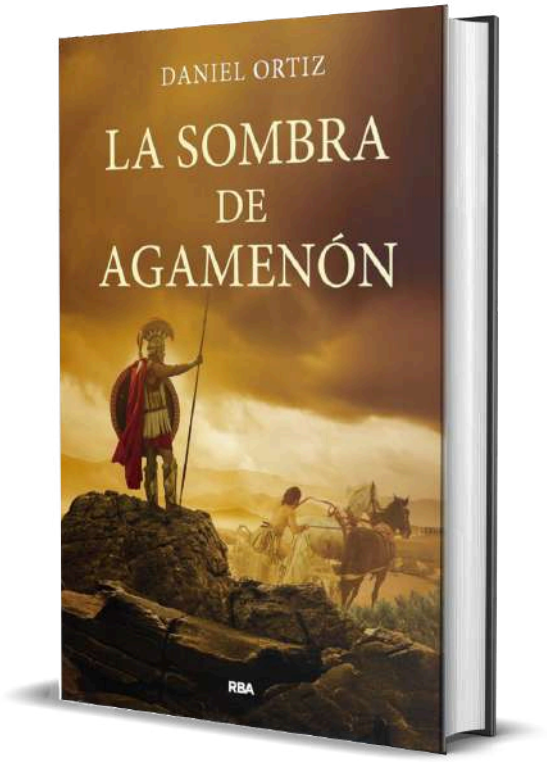
Daniel Ortiz (Alcoy, 1992) is a writer with a passion for the classical world. After studying history at the University of Alicante, he has devoted himself primarily to writing historical novels. He has been awarded several literary prizes, most notably the 2024 Puerta de Andalucía Award for the Most Promising Author. To date, he has published Los Hijos de Prometeo and El Arca de Villamanta.

Perfect for readers drawn to the current international resurgence of mythological and ancient-world fiction, while offering a more human, grounded and character-driven approach to the Trojan cycle.

Combines historical detail, political intrigue, warfare and court rivalries with an accessible and highly immersive narrative style.

In the Peloponnese, Aurimedon grows up as an orphan among horses before becoming the royal charioteer of Agamemnon, the legendary king of Mycenae. As his bond with the monarch deepens, Aurimedon becomes not only his closest companion, but also the silent witness to a life shaped by ambition, war, glory and downfall.

Amid sacred games, political conspiracies, battles and fierce family rivalries, Aurimedon navigates the dangerous world surrounding the royal court while observing the rise and fractures of one of the most powerful figures in Greek mythology.



Rich in historical atmosphere and human conflict, The Shadow of Agamemnon offers a compelling journey into mythical Mycenae, where power and passion constantly collide.

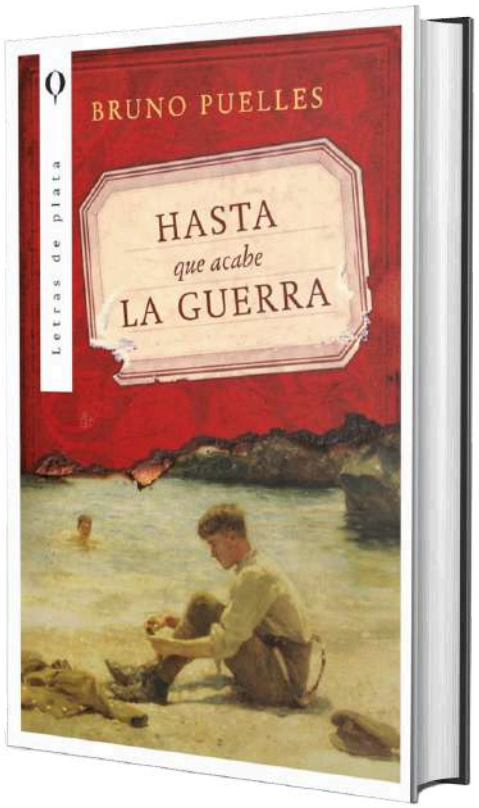
Bruno Puelles

Bruno Puelles is the author of the Minotauro Award-finalist novel Simbiosis (Symbiosis), the Ciudad de Utrera Award-finalist novella Marea oscura (Dark Tide) and the novella Nistagmo (Dancing Eyes), which obtained a special mention of the jury in the UPC Awards. His newest novel is El ciclo de vida de la mariposa nocturna (The life cycle of the nocturnal butterfly), an urban fantasy YA book.
Bruno has written short film scripts (one of them was the winner of the El Tranvía Film Festival Award for Best Script) and theater plays. He is since 2019 editor of the magazine Opportunity of Spain's Association of Fantasy, Science Fiction and Horror (Pórtico). He has spoken about theatre and books at events such as Hispacon, the Golem Festival, the Celsius 232 Festival and the WorldCon.

Bruno Puelles once again showcases his exquisite style and grips us from the very first page, not only with a solid plot but with memorable characters—the kind that stay with you even after you've finished reading.

It is one of those novels destined to become a contemporary classic.

Timothy did not expect to find a printing press among the ruins of a bombed city.
Chio did not expect Timothy to know how to use it.
Neither of them expected to become editors of a satirical newspaper. Neither of them expected to succeed or to publish a serialized novel. Nor did they expect the author to stop giving signs of life in the penultimate chapter.
And neither of them expected to embark on a dangerous race against time across a country at war to find the mysterious writer. But great stories deserve a great ending, and they are going to publish it no matter the cost.



Written with skill and great sensitivity in bringing characters to life, it immerses the reader in a corner of post-World War I Europe full of stories that need to be told.

Silence in the blue house

Arantza García Roces

Arantxa García Roces was born in Gijón in 1972. She has a degree in law from the University of Oviedo and is an expert in Mediation and Conflict Resolution, also from the University of Oviedo. She has developed her professional career in the legal world, where she has worked as a lawyer specializing in family law and civil law. For more than fifteen years, she devoted herself to writing about legal issues, until she decided to make the leap into literature. Her first novel, La caja de los miedos (Roca editorial, 2022), has been awarded the 2022 Marta de Mont Marçal International Narrative Prize.

A sweeping story that connects 19th-century Asturias, colonial Cuba, and 1970s Spain through intertwined family destinies.

Family secrets, social tensions, and emotional conflict drive a compelling narrative across time.

Llanes, 1870. The paths of Mario Melgar and the Lorenzo sisters cross briefly, but his ambition soon places an ocean between their destinies. Years later, after making a fortune in Cuba, Mario returns to his hometown accompanied by Malena, a beautiful mulatta whose presence awakens curiosity and suspicion in a village that has not forgotten the past.
Madrid, 1970. When Nuria Melgar inherits an old indiano mansion in Asturias, grief pushes her to cling to the last remnants of her family legacy. Traveling to Llanes with her controlling and violent husband, she begins to uncover the secrets hidden within the mysterious Blue House—secrets that will force her to confront the past and rediscover her own strength.
Spanning generations, this vibrant historical novel intertwines love, family, domestic violence, sisterhood, and the courage required to reinvent oneself in the face of adversity.

Love, ambition, abuse, and redemption create a story that balances historical depth with contemporary relevance.

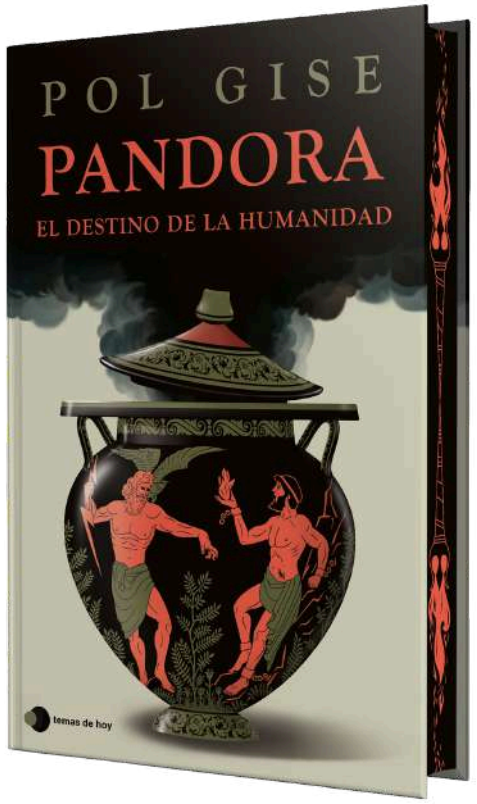
He has more than 3 million followers in social media and amongst his videos two series, "Salseo Griego" and "Salseo Bíblico, stand out with millions of views.

With more than 30.000 copies sold, Pol Gise has become a leading voice in mythology in the spanish speaking market.

Fresh, unique voice with a fascinating approach.

Pandora was born to change everything.
The problem was no one told her.
What if the greatest threat to the gods was humanity's destiny?
When Prometheus, a Titan who betrayed his kind, creates the first humans at Zeus's command, he believes he's fulfilling an act of redemption. But the gods aren't seeking company—they want worship.
Soon, Prometheus faces a dilemma: keep serving the god who destroyed his family, or give his creatures divine fire—the gift of knowledge.
In an Olympus where power is whim and eternity a curse, gods and Titans manipulate the fate of mortals. The only thing that can change it is a sealed jar... and a woman who has yet to be born.
Told through the voices of the story's four main characters, Pol Gise delivers a modern, sharp, and emotional reimagining of the myth of Pandora—packed with dark humor and biting critique.
A powerful exploration of freedom, creation, and the cost of power—Greek mythology as you've never seen it before.



Pol Gise has created a fascinating and complex portrait of the most defining myths of all.

Your name at midnight

A sweeping romance set against the backdrop of conflict, exploring how passion and intimacy can survive—and even flourish—when surrounded by chaos.

Two women who defy the brutality of war to find each other, offering a fresh, emotionally charged narrative that blends romance, historical drama, and psychological depth..

PETROGRAD, 1917.
Alexandra has become the heroine of the people; it happened almost without her realizing it, for she embodies everything the First Women's Battalion of Death represents: courage, strength, and blind devotion.
Varinka has escaped the control of a half-brother she deeply fears and, to do so, she has only one option: to serve in the army's medical corps.
It will be in a hospital in Petrograd, under the least expected circumstances, that the nurse and the soldier will meet. And from that moment on, despite fate's determination to separate them, they will seek a way for their paths to cross again and again...
But in times of war, no one's life is guaranteed, and both Varinka and Alexandra will have to make choices, sacrifices, and discover how far they are willing to go to write the ending of their story.

She continues on sharing her poems in her Instagram account and is about to publish her new novel Si el agua nos lleva.

With an immersive and emotional narrative, Elena Peña takes us to a bustling Bilbao at the dawn of the 20th century, shaping two unforgettable protagonists.

A great forbidden love, drama, and secrets in early 20th-century Bilbao.

Bilbao, 1914. Amelia Eguren, daughter of an illustrious family, is about to marry a man she hardly knows. Behind her engagement lie many interests, some of which she doesn't even suspect. While he owns one of the most prosperous businesses in the city, Amelia secretly manages the La Blanca soda factory, so this alliance could give her everything she has always fought for.

However, when Irune, a humble cleaner, starts working at the factory, her perception of the world begins to change, and an unexpected bond forms between the two women, transcending prejudices. Over the course of four decades, these two women will fight to survive and cling to love during a turbulent time when wars, disease, and the struggle for freedom will shake their homes.

"A delightful and captivating story that seduces the reader." — Celia Santos

The Portuguese war

Jordi Sierra i Fabra

Jordi Sierra i Fabra was born in 1947 in Barcelona. He was the only child of a very humble family and he stumbled with many obstacles that made it difficult to fulfill his dream of becoming a writer, one of them was his father's disapproval. His link to the world of rock and roll (he directed and founded some of the most important Spanish magazines related to rock) made him very popular, but he never abandoned his true desire: writing the stories that his volcanic mind invented.

He published his first book in 1972. Since then, he has written more than five hundred works, he has won forty literary prizes; likewise, he has received tons of honorary mentions and has appeared in many honor lists. His works have been translated to more than thirty different languages. A restless, romantic and passionate traveler, he considers himself to be an utopic possibilist and a lover of the written word and of freedom.

Jordi Sierra i Fabra delivers a truly magnificent novel with a unique blend of genres.

A testament to history and the human experience, where the characters feel relatable and real.

There are times when people's destinies are decided in offices. Argimiro, a broken republican, hides in a bunker, consumed by thoughts of revenge. Jewish doctor Arnaud and his wife flee Paris in fear. Miguel Ángel, a diplomat in Lisbon, seeks solace abroad. Isabel, searching for her sister lost in the war, unexpectedly finds love. Like them, countless others face uncertain futures.

In 1940, the world is changing. Hitler, ruler of half of Europe, courts Spain while planning his Russian campaign. Franco, victorious but struggling with hunger and repression, weighs reclaiming Gibraltar while maintaining neutrality. In London, Churchill watches suspiciously, balancing war efforts and German bombings. Meanwhile, Portugal remains overlooked, caught between the shadows of greater powers.

A gripping tale of survival, choices, and the shifting tides of history.

The Librarian of Córdoba

Andrea D. Morales

Andrea D. Morales (1995, Sevilla). She studied history in the University of Sevilla, where she majored in the Middle Ages, more specifically in gender history in al-Andalus.

After completing the master's degree in teacher training in secondary education and baccalaureate, she currently works as a professor of historical documentation at the School of Youth Literature for Writers.

Among her published works are Crónicas del mar, Bajo la luz de faro, Las brujas de Tintagel and La última sultana.

The latest novel by rising historical fiction star Andrea D. Morales, whose previous titles have sold more than 20.000 copies.

It hold the perfect convination for historical fiction: passion, love and secrets.

There was a time when only books could guard wisdom, making them treasures. To protect them, the largest library in the history of the West was established in Córdoba. It is there that Nasir, a young doctor from Baghdad, arrives with the mission of finding a valuable manuscript. There, he meets Lubna, one of the caliph's most daring and trusted slaves, a guardian of wisdom and books.

The Library of Córdoba takes us back to the golden age of the caliphate, where women—poets, mathematicians, conservators, and catalogers—were entrusted with safeguarding knowledge. This extraordinary story, filled with palace intrigue, mysteries, and passion, will forever change the destinies of Nasir and Lubna.

Andrea Tomé

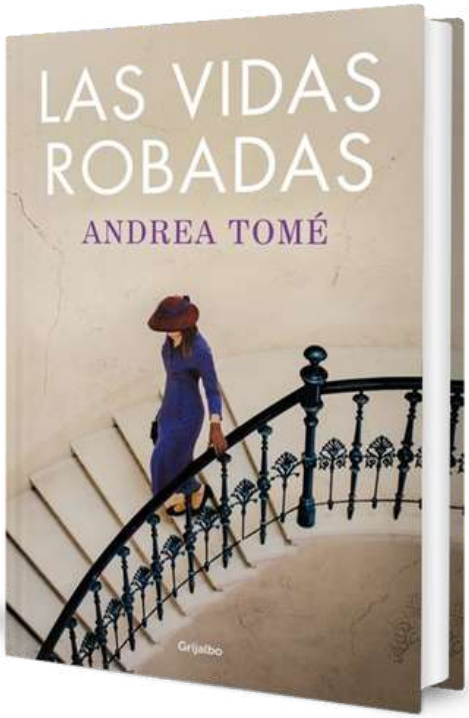
Andrea Tomé is an author, philologist and editor born in the Autumn of 1994 in Ferrol. She writes for teenagers and for adults who are not afraid to read books for teenagers. You may know her for her novels Corazón de mariposa (Plataforma Neo, 2014; winner of the La Caixa/Plataforma Neo literary prize), Entre dos universos (Plataforma Neo, 2015), Desayuno en Júpiter (Plataforma Neo, 2017), El valle oscuro (Plataforma Neo, 2017; winner of the Templis Award in the category Best National Standalone), La luna en la puerta (Crossbooks, 2019; winner of the Templis Award in the category Best National Standalone), Kiss & Cry (La Galera, 2021) and La chica de hielo (Crossbooks, 2021).
She currently resides in London, where you may find her in the ice rink or in one of her favourite cafés.

The stolen lives

A moving story of struggle, hope, and love in post-war madrid.

After the success of "Ashes and Ink" Andrea Tomé returns with her most ambitious novel yet.

The young Ana de la Torre returns, along with her family, to Madrid, recently conquered by the Falangists. Although her family feels relieved by the victory of the Francoist troops, she watches the changes around her with suspicion: there is poverty in the streets, her brother has become a fervent supporter of the dictatorship, and her closest friends are suffering the consequences of having supported the Republic.
Furthermore, a new fear grips her: a shadow is sweeping across Europe, threatening the lives of Jews. Among them is Imre, a young Hungarian with whom she used to spend summers—and with whom she is hopelessly in love. Caught between love and loyalty, Ana will struggle to follow her own path and to find a happiness the world seems determined to take from her.



Andrea Tomé delves into one of the most difficult moments of our recent history and crafts a beautiful tale of strength and dignity.

As the phoenix rises

An Immersive Journey into Ancient China

From an Award-Winning Voice in Historical Fiction

A Gripping Tale of Survival and Power

In the year 263 B.C., China is shaken by the violent Warring States Period, a civil war that has literally dragged on for centuries, with every territory seeking to conquer the others. The two greatest rivals in this conflict are the cultured kingdom of Zhao and the belligerent kingdom of Qin.

In the kingdom of Zhao lives Fengying, who will go down in history as the mother of the first emperor of China.

But before that, she was much more: a survivor in a turbulent world. A phoenix rising above a sea of betrayals.

Historical thriller a la "Name of the Rose"

Fast paced, well documented historical fiction based on true events that could have changed the course of history

In 1319, Prince Jaime, heir to King Jaime II of Aragon, harbors a religious inclination that his father disapproves of and keeps a secret known only to his confessor. Renouncing the crown would break his engagement to Princess Leonor of Castile, risking a diplomatic crisis. As their courts meet at Miravet Castle, unsettling events unfold: the kidnapping and torture of Jaime's confessor and the mysterious death of a page. A Hospitaller knight and a lady of Leonor's entourage uncover a document linking Jaime, his confessor, and the castle chaplain, Jorge. Counselor Vidal is sent by the king to ensure Jaime's compliance and keep his secret hidden. The fortress becomes a battleground of power struggles, ambition, and revenge, with an enigma threatening unprecedented scandal in Christendom.

Nothing to hide

A controversial and original thriller that will make you question everything you thought you know.

A gripping and timely thriller that presents a reality far more imminent and chilling than we ever imagined.

A society surrendered to new technologies.

When it is discovered that artificial intelligence is capable of analyzing the population and predicting who will commit a crime, the world welcomes it as great news. Citizens agree to give up their privacy in exchange for a drastic reduction in crime.

A woman who dares to question science.

Rebeca, a young lawyer, is a firm supporter of this breakthrough until an unforeseen event changes her perspective. The AI has identified her cousin as a criminal, but she refuses to believe it. Her efforts to prove his innocence collide with a powerful system that will not admit the slightest mistake... and that will do whatever it takes to erase any trace of doubt.

When technology becomes faith, questioning it seems like heresy.

In the name of the fire

2026

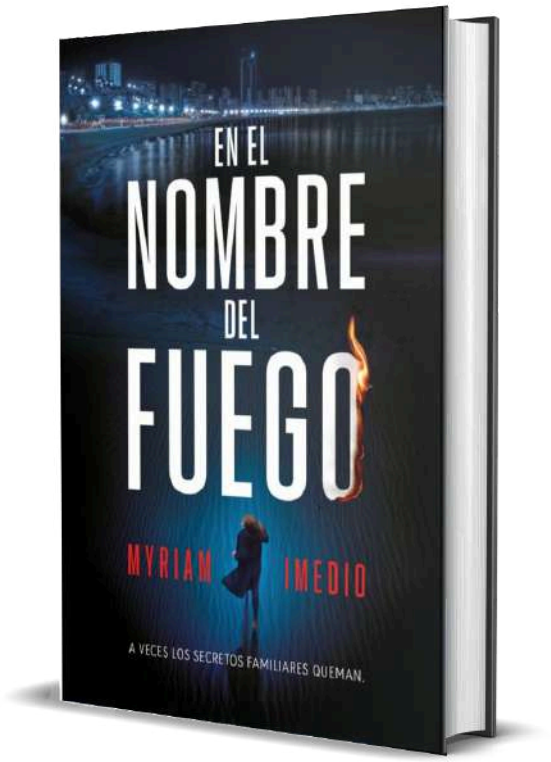
A high-stakes countdown thriller where a deadly game pits hunter against prey within a powerful criminal organization.

A gripping psychological duel between two formidable women, bound by secrets, manipulation, and fire.

Inspector Martos is on the verge of retirement, but he refuses to step away until he puts an end to the obsession that has haunted him for years: dismantling La Llama, a criminal organization made up of Europe's finest hitmen. After several failed attempts, his only remaining option is to endanger what he loves most—his daughter.

From the moment Mery infiltrates the institution, she becomes part of a perverse, time-driven game in which she must overcome trials that force her to risk her life and uncover hidden riddles and secrets in order to reach La Llama.

Leila Leclerc, one of La Llama's most controversial members, is tasked with running the game and becomes Mery's scourge and shadow, while Mery remains unaware of who is guiding her steps. Without mercy or remorse, Leila turns the game into a nightmare for the player and a source of amusement for herself.



A dark, fast-paced plot packed with conspiracies, riddles, and life-or-death trials that keep tension high to the final page.

Mozart's key

Fernando Méndez

A journalist and writer from Orense, he has been director of communications at public and private institutions, editor at Faro de Vigo and La Región, and contributor to ABC, Televisión de Galicia, Cuatro TV, and Radio Nacional. He holds a master's degree in Drug Addiction and, as an investigative journalist, has received awards such as the Reina Sofía Journalism Prize (1992 and 1993), the Xunta de Galicia Journalism Award (1990, 1991, and 1995), the Julio Camba National Journalism Award (1991), and the Ana María Agüero Melnyczuk International Journalism Research Award for his well-documented essay on the Metílico Case (Argentina, 2013). In the literary field, he has received the City of Almería Novel Award (2014), the Ramón Puga-Cadena SER Ourense Award (2014), and the Vicente Risco Literary Creation Award (2011).

Combines classical music, hidden codes, and historical intrigue in the tradition of intelligent, page-turning suspense.

The enduring global fascination with Mozart gives the story instant international recognition and appeal.

In La clave de Mozart, a hidden mystery linked to the music of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart sets in motion a gripping story that bridges past and present. When a long-buried secret surfaces, it reveals that one of Mozart's compositions may conceal more than artistic genius — it may hold the key to an enigma powerful enough to change everything we thought we knew.
As clues unravel across historical documents, coded scores, and dangerous discoveries, the protagonists are drawn into a race against time where music, ambition, and betrayal intertwine. What begins as a cultural puzzle soon becomes a high-stakes quest where deciphering a melody could mean uncovering a truth meant to remain hidden.

Appeals to readers who enjoy thrillers rooted in culture, history, and intellectual puzzles.

Historia del cine de zombis español (Shangrilá, 2019). She teaches screenwriting and literature at U-TAD and in the Master's Degree in Screenwriting at the URJC.

A pshychological, paranormal thriller that questions morality in our current society.

From screenwriting mastermind Rubén Sánchez Trigos.

A raw thriller that doubles as a dark metaphor for our labor reality.

The Origin

2004. A man rushes into a Madrid hospital, a bundle of nerves, as his wife is in labor. He is quickly informed that the baby girl was stillborn. But then, before he has a chance to process this devastating news, he is hit with another macabre and incomprehensible revelation...

The Discovery

Nineteen years later. Like many young people in Leganés, Silvia faces a grim present and an uncertain future. During a neighborhood protest, she witnesses the death of her best friend. In a desperate act, Silvia runs to her friend's lifeless body and embraces her—a gesture that, inexplicably, brings her back to life.

The Horror

From that moment on, Silvia embarks on a path she cannot control. She soon discovers that this strange gift not only makes her unique but also highly sought after by a seemingly innovative company hiding something far more sinister.

The night the bells rang

Acquired in a heated four way auction.

Highly anticipated debut.

Mystery and legend mix in this atmopsheric thriller set in Asturias.

Leading title in the brand new impring from Planeta, N de Novela

The unknown Asturias hidden behind the fog is the setting for a fierce and extravagant crime: the body of a young councilman is found dismembered and buried up to the knees under the branches of an ancient yew tree. Is it part of a morbid ritual or a political vendetta?
The police team in charge of the investigation, led by the thoughtful Lieutenant Juan Peña, will have to delve deep into a reality that seems more suited to another realm. Apple fields amidst noisy cliffs and silent gorges, winding roads and overwhelming landscapes, strange ceremonies and Celtic legends in the dark night. A world where time is leisurely, rural nature prevails, and the ghosts of the past become ancestral wisdom; forcing the investigators to wander between what is real and what is possible.
To solve the enigma, everyone must ask themselves the same question: where do the dead hide the poison of the truth sought by the living?

The line between myth and fact draws narrower in every step of the investigation.

The darkness in me

Joaquin Camps

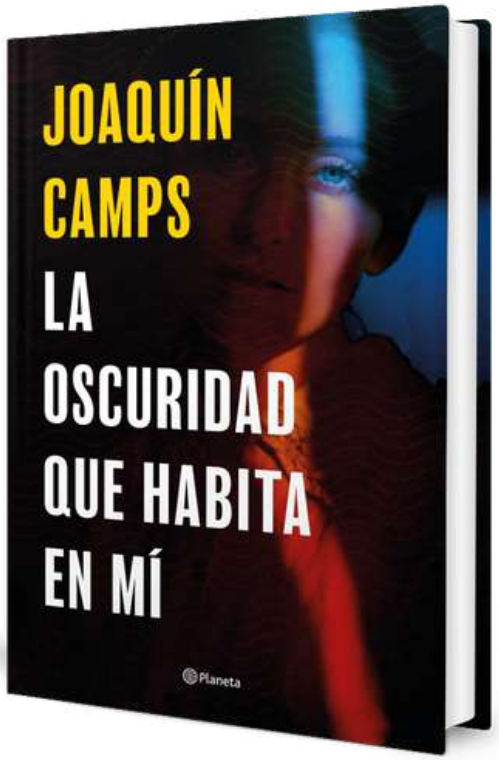
Joaquín Camps is professor at the University of Valencia (Spain), the city where he lives. His research speciality is organizational behaviour. He has published two novels to date, framed in the thriller/crime fiction genre: "La última confidencia del escritor Hugo Mendoza" (Editorial Planeta, published in Spanish, Catalan and French); "La silueta del olvido" (Editorial Planeta, Azorín prize 2019). The rights to shoot a series in co-production Spain/France have been sold from the first. The rights to shoot a film in the US have been sold for the second.

The new thriller by Joaquín Camps, whose previous works have sold more than 80.000 copies.

A psychological thriller set in Barcelona.

With a fresh and direct style. Impossible to put down.

People travel to be in another place. They love for the same reason. With that ideal in mind, the young and attractive Cameron leaves her native United States to come and live in Barcelona. Here, she succeeds as a fashion influencer and finds love. But also illness. And abandonment. Her dream life crumbles overnight, leaving her with only one consolation: spying on the house across the street, where her ex-husband lives with his current wife. When the couple's daughter disappears, all suspicions fall on Cameron. But there is someone particularly interested in finding out if the young American influencer committed the crime: herself. With a light and seemingly trivial prose, sprinkled with humor, Joaquín Camps manages to immerse us in the most intimate recesses of the human soul without us noticing. The pages go by unnoticed because there are two mysteries to solve in this novel: who made Maria disappear, and why desire, that small carburetor we all carry inside, changes everything as soon as it starts pumping.



It will have you holding your breath until the very end.

A Rain Arpeggio on the Glass

José Luis Correa

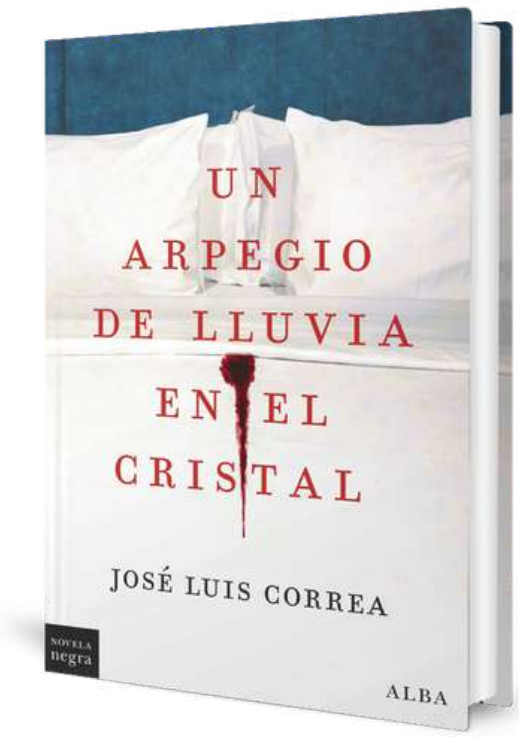
He was born in Las Palmas in 1962. He is a professor of Language and Literature Didactics at the University of Las Palmas de Gran Canaria. His first short stories won, among others, the Julio Cortázar Award (La Laguna, 1998) and the Campus Award (Las Palmas, 1999). As a novelist he won the Benito Pérez Armas Award (Santa Cruz de Tenerife, 2000) with Me mataron tan mal and the Vargas Llosa Award (Murcia, 2002) with Échale un ojo a Carla. But perhaps Correa's most significant contribution to the Spanish literary scene has to do with the creation of a character that is already part of the imaginary of today's crime novels: detective Ricardo Blanco.

Bestselling author that is rapidly growing to become a reference name in quality, noir, literature in the spanish market.

Author translated into several languages.

In late June, shortly after the lockdown eases, Naval Street unveils a grim scene: Elías Almeida and Ángel Estupiñán, both esteemed in their fields, are found murdered in their shared attic. As customary in such cases, an unexplained mystery shrouds the crime. Ángel, a tailor, and Elías, a teacher and writer, leave behind a perplexing crime scene. Frustrated by the police's opacity, Almeida's mother enlists the help of an eccentric detective skilled in solving mysteries.

Thus begins the fourteenth installment of the novel series featuring Ricardo Blanco, José Luis Correa's alter ego. The narrative delves into ambiguities, a murderer scattering contradictory clues, and a convoluted motive oscillating between homophobia and vengeance. Against the backdrop of COVID's gloom, the city of Las Palmas de Gran Canaria transforms into a funeral parlor, where losers, anti-heroes, and characters marked by past errors converge on a stage frozen in time.



We once again encounter a reflective and wry Ricardo Blanco, for whom today's world is an enigma. A mature work that, beyond a crime and an investigation, speaks of fear, loneliness, and pain in a language, from the very title, as poetic as it is natural.

Paris of dormant dreams

Noemí Quesada

Noemí Quesada was born in Murcia in August 1986. She earned a diploma in Tourism and eventually found her place in the fashion world. A lifelong lover of words, she began writing a private blog during her teenage years. In 2017, she discovered self-publishing and decided to turn that blog into a book of micro-stories and reflections. That first, impulsive publication is what made her consider writing her first novel. To date, she has published eighteen books, most of them focused on romance, although she considers herself quite versatile and restless, enjoying the exploration of different genres. For her, writing is a means of escape, a way to process daily life, and the best remedy for achieving mental peace. She is passionate about reading, traveling, music, cinema, and cooking.

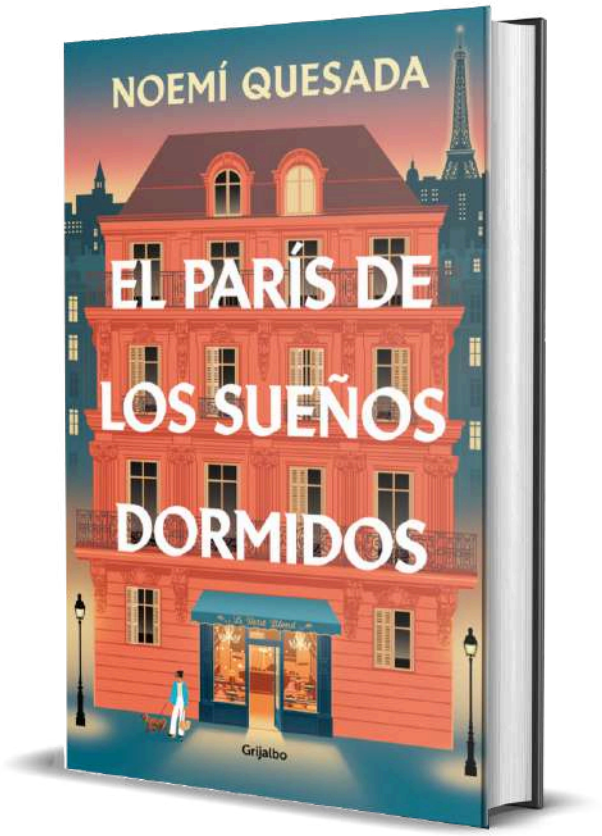
Atmospheric Parisian setting filled with art, pastry, fashion, music, books, and the charm of neighborhood life.

A heartwarming ensemble novel set in Montmartre, capturing the magic and everyday poetry of contemporary Paris.

In a charming building on rue Lepic, in the heart of Montmartre, a group of neighbors quietly carries the weight of forgotten dreams.

Étienne, a pastry chef and devoted single father, once dreamed of becoming a singer. Sylvie has built her life around success in the fashion industry, yet begins to question whether ambition alone is enough. Clodette, an elderly widow with fragile bones and a sharp mind, finds joy in books and in observing the life around her. Pascal, a once-celebrated painter, has withdrawn from the world after an accident ended his career. And Nadine, Étienne's daughter, stands at the uncertain edge of adulthood, searching for her own path.

When a newly arrived neighbor brings the residents together, their lives begin to intertwine in unexpected ways. Hidden within the building lies one final mystery—an empty apartment that may offer someone a chance to confront the past and rediscover the courage to dream again.



Perfect for readers of character-driven stories like Amélie or The Little Paris Bookshop

The Heirs of Greed

Brugués Mitjans Prunera

(Gavá, 1964), graduated in Law from the University of Barcelona; she completed a master's degree in Catalan Law at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. She is a lawyer for the Catalan Government. She has published El ventall finès and Quan el destí conspira a favor teu.

A high-stakes drama centered on power, money, and inheritance within a wealthy dynasty.

Perfect for readers of contemporary drama, dynastic thrillers, and stories about wealth and power struggles.

Explores ambition, corruption, and moral compromise in a way that resonates strongly in today's social climate.

A powerful family empire stands on the brink of collapse when ambition, betrayal, and long-buried secrets begin to surface. What once appeared to be an unshakable dynasty reveals cracks beneath its polished façade, as heirs clash over legacy, power, and control.

As tensions rise, alliances shift and loyalties fracture, exposing the emotional cost of wealth and the corrosive force of greed. Each character must confront not only their rivals, but also their own moral limits in a world where influence can be bought — but trust cannot.

A gripping drama about inheritance, family bonds, and the price of ambition, this novel explores how far people are willing to go to secure what they believe is rightfully theirs.

Fast-paced plot with twists, shifting loyalties, and escalating tension.

Claudia Romera Moya

She holds a degree in Advertising and Public Relations, with over 30 years of experience in branding, communication, marketing, advertising, and public relations. She is an expert in strategic brand positioning, a university professor, and a writer. Among her professional achievements is her work on the international expansion of the F.C. Barcelona brand, a role she carried out during her tenure as the club's marketing director. In 2016, she founded her own consultancy specializing in strategic marketing and branding for social impact projects. This is her first novel.

A brutally honest story about what women carry with them when we don't know how to give ourselves peace..

Written with irresistible freshness, this sharply funny novel explores toxic inheritances accepted without question, the always-complicated ties of family, unbridled ambition, and misunderstood desires for independence.

All my life, I've tried not to be like my parents, shaping who I am in opposition to who they were. But what if there's an invisible contract that keeps me repeating the family story—just in reverse?

At forty-two, I've finally made it: marketing director of a hotel chain on the brink of entering luxury with a resort in Fiji. My schedule is ruthless, my patience for family or marital drama nonexistent. A desperate attempt to save my marriage backfires spectacularly, leaving me injured, exhausted, and back at work just in time to discover that a ruthless rival wants my job and the pressure above me is unbearable.

Now I'm worn out, angry, and surrounded by people telling me to stop, to take care of myself, to tear up that lifelong contract I never meant to sign. But I don't know how to live without running. So how do I get out of this mess?

A story to make you laugh, recognize yourself, and wonder what the heck we're inheriting without even realizing it.

She studied a degree in Modern Languages and Literature at the University of Barcelona and specialised in Spanish as a Foreign Language in Professional Environments. Currently, she is working as a Secondary School teacher and a Spanish as a second Language tutor.
Since she was a child, writing has been one of her main forms of escape. When she was a teenager, she started to write assiduously thank to her Spanish Language and Literature teacher. Later on, during her stay in the university, she created a series of short love stories that combined some little doses of humour and published them anonymously on the faculty's forum. The great acceptance made her to take her hobby to a more professional level.
If you want to find her, search for some taking pictures of flowers or playing a random dog.

Hotaru

The authors second published novel is a decisive landmark. Absolute growth in narrative construction and character developement.

It mixes slight mystery elements with the perfect dose of nostalgia and romance.

Seiya Hayashi is a young doctor whose only concern in life has been researching a rare lung disease he suffers from—until one day, she slipped into his dreams.

After a severe respiratory crisis, he decides to move back to his hometown, a small village in Gifu Prefecture, to study the "curse," as he calls it, that he inherited from his father. However, there he will come face to face with his past—the memories he thought he had buried when his heart was broken as a teenager.

In his search to uncover what happened to his first love, Seiya embarks on a journey full of secrets, where he discovers that what truly shattered his life was not his illness, but the web of lies that someone has been weaving around him.

In the heart of Tokyo's neon-lit suburbs, Mia Kobayashi, an ambitious journalist facing career challenges, embarks on a perilous journey. Offered a chance by her boss to investigate a murky scandal potentially impacting the U.S. presidential candidate, Mia finds herself entangled in the labyrinth of Tokyo's underworld controlled by the Yakuza. As she delves deeper, a ruthless assassin known as The Samurai is unleashed to hunt her down. What unfolds is a gripping enemies-to-lovers tale, defying expectations and weaving through the complexities of love, suspense, corruption, and resilience. Carmen Sereno's dynamic narrative in 'El corazón del samurái' captures the essence of Tokyo's enigmatic allure, delivering a dangerous yet enchanting story that resonates with lovers of Japan. The novel unfolds amidst the pulsating lights, offering a unique blend of action, romance, and mystery that will captivate readers seeking an immersive and emotionally charged experience.

Bestselling author that has managed to secure a constant readership in the spanish market.

Javier Miró

Javier Miró was born in Seville in 1981. He writes fantasy, science fiction and horror books. He has published three novels, Ojalá tú nunca (Insólita, 2020), La Armadura de la Luz (Minotauro, 2017) and Rebelión 20.06.19 (first edition in Triskel Ediciones, 2014; fifth and current edition in Cazador, 2023), and a non-fiction work: the Autorquía Self-Publishing Manual (self-published, 2016). In addition to writing, he advises writers through Autorquía, the publishing and literary agency he runs. He also shares resources for writers through his YouTube channel. He founded the online magazine specialized in independent literature Libros Prohibidos and, for 5 years (until 2019), he was its director.

Gray was the Wasteland

A modern masterpiece of worldbuilding and character development.

This Wasteland is bound to become the go-to place for hardcore readers of fantasy.

Only the strongest dare to enter the Wasteland. Only the lucky ones manage to escape.
In a world without color or justice, ruled by the misery of many and the greed of a few, there exists a region no one dares to cross. A dark and treacherous land where betrayal reigns and danger lurks.
That place is the Wasteland.
Nyx knows this well. She is a wanderer, a creature gifted with an exceptional power that not only makes her the deadliest of assassins but also binds her to a ruthless master she longs to escape from.
Despite his youth, Lem is no stranger to cruelty. He experiences it firsthand at the Academy, where he struggles in vain to master the art of predicting the future. Aware that great failure comes with severe punishment, escape becomes his only option.
An uncertain future and a perilous path lie ahead for both. The Wasteland is a place for the reckless, the criminals... or the desperate—those who no longer care whether they choose freedom or death.

"A novel that stands alongside the gritty and realistic fantasy of Martin or Abercrombie, proof that the genre has reached magnificent maturity in our country."
—David B. Gil, author of The Warrior in the Shadow of the Cherry Tree

Love at last sight

Cristian Martín

Cristian Martín was born in Barcelona on 1994 and since then he hasn't stopped creating stories. At middle school, he read manga during recess and wrote his own fan-fiction. At high school, he read Jane Austen under the desk at Philosophy class, and he was determined to get his degree in Theory of Literature and Literary Criticism. Currently, he has a job on the publishing market, as drawing away from books was never an option. Cristian combines his work with his career as professional writer. Solíamos nosotros, his first published novel, was the winner of the 7th "La Caixa" / Plataforma Literary YA Award.

A fun, captivating story with fresh, sharp writing and masterfully created characters.

A lead title for Newton Compton in Spain.

Rica's life is falling apart. Once a thriving influencer, she's now losing followers, stuck in a dead-end internship, and kicked out by her roommates. Her agency has no idea what to do with her, and even a heartfelt magazine interview doesn't help. At least she has Salva, her love-hate best friend, though he has his own struggles.

Then there's Enric, the charming intern, and Héctor, her toxic ex who won't disappear. With everything slipping through her fingers, Rica must figure out how to reclaim her life before it spirals completely out of control.

"A story of new beginnings that will make you believe in love and true friendship."

Crazy for her

Cristina Prieto

(1994 Ferrol), known in social media as Nana Literaria, has a booktube channel, another one in Twitch, moderates and presents young adult literature events in Madrid (when pandemics don't get in the way), and gets involved right away in every mess she is invited to, especially if she can talk.

Apart from writing and reading, she is passionate about her cats, loves Latin dancing, voluntary work with homeless people, and not having free time.

She works professionally in the field of international cooperation and her mission in life is to always go through it with a smile.

In 2009, when she was 15 years old, she published her first book. Since then, nine more books have followed.

Girl meets boy. Only this time around he tells the story.

Cristina Prieto is an emerging voice in Spanish romance.

Her body of work expands for over a decade, publishing independently and in mainstream publishing houses.

Perfect for fans of "The Love Hypothesis" by Ali Hazelwood.

The Mateo who returned from Rome is not the same as the one who left. Now he lives with the ghost of a relationship that has completely destroyed him.

Everything in his life is shaky, and he can't risk losing anyone else, so one thing is clear: Paula is the one girl he is forbidden to fall for.

Because Paula is not only the best friend of Nico, his younger brother (with whom he shares an apartment). She is also the girl Nico is in love with.
The problem is that Mateo never believed in love at first sight... until he met her.

When you have to choose between your certainties and your fears, are you able to resist temptation?

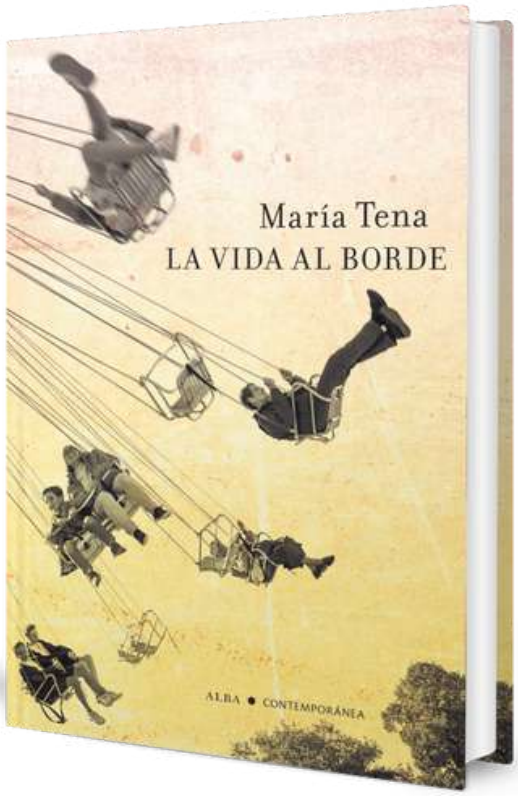
Life on edge

María Tena

SMaría Tena, with a degree in Law and Hispanic Literature (Philosophy and Letters), has served as the director of the Book and Reading Center and the Center of Spanish Letters at the Ministry of Culture. She was the general commissioner for Spain at the Shanghai Expo in 2010. She has authored the novels "Tenemos que vernos" (2003), "Todavía tú" (2007) (both semifinalists for the Herralde Prize), "La fragilidad de las panteras" (finalist for the Primavera Prize, 2010), "El novio chino" (Málaga Novel Prize, 2016), and "Nada que no sepas" (Tusquets Prize, 2018). Her short stories and micro-stories, many of them award-winning, have been published in anthologies and textbooks across Europe, Ibero-America, the United States, and Russia. She is a professor of Creative Writing and Novel, and has collaborated for many years with Alba Editorial.



The journey into adulthood through the time span of a single night.

An intimate novel about the place where illness puts us, on the edge, and about how the exceptional circumstances it entails allow for a clearer vision of life, modifying it irreversibly.

Teresa is a Literature teacher at a high school. She has two young daughters and is married to Vicente, with whom she barely shares anything anymore. One night, she discovers that a lump has appeared in her breast again.

In a whirlwind of positive and negative experiences—fear, pain, despair, but also hope, optimism, and trust—Teresa spends a month in the hospital. There, she befriends Tomás, much older than her, who has just lost a leg but not the will to live; Paula, a thirty-five-year-old who retains the spirit of adolescence; and Felipe, a former student of hers, admitted due to a motorcycle accident. The narrative intertwines with pages from Teresa's diary, recounting memories from two years ago with Carlos, the man who made her feel alive again.

Together, they create an atmosphere no longer associated with the expected suffering in a hospital but rather with the warmth of a family, with all its confidences and care, with all its possibilities for intimacy, love, and feeling. "The people we live with are the ones who build our home, more than the bricks or furniture," Teresa writes in her diary.

The Padel Girls

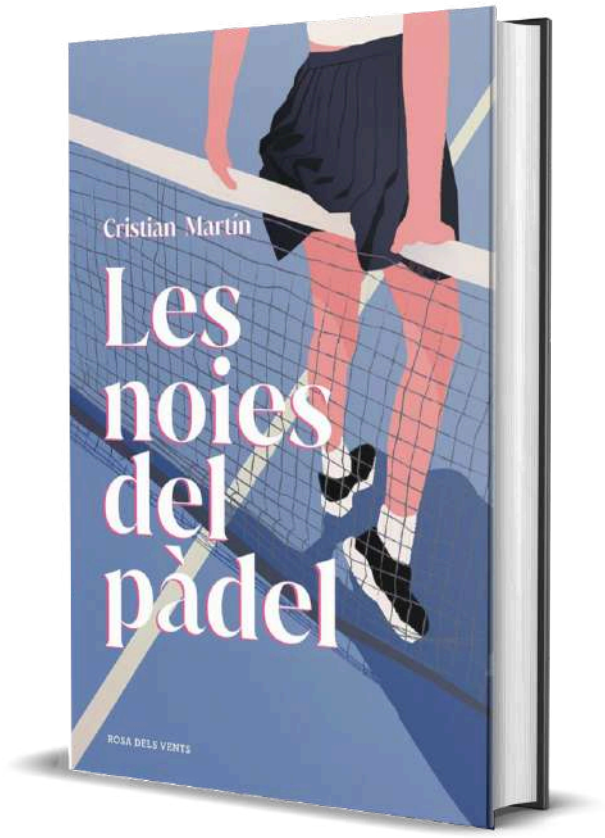
NEW!

Four women. One weekly padel match. And love lives that are anything but a perfect game.

A witty, feel-good novel about friendship, dating and second chances, set against the irresistible social world of padel.

Tuesday afternoons are sacred: a padel match, plenty of sweat and drinks afterwards to put the world to rights.
Queralt, Arlet, Carlota and Mireia may share the same court, but their love lives are playing by very different rules. Between irresistible new romances, unexpected desires, break-ups and relationships that refuse to stay in the past, the four friends discover that love is much harder to master than any sport.

Full of humour, friendship and romantic mishaps, The Padel Girls is a lively contemporary comedy about taking chances, getting back in the game and having the right friends by your side.



Love is like padel: if no one returns the ball, is it really worth playing?

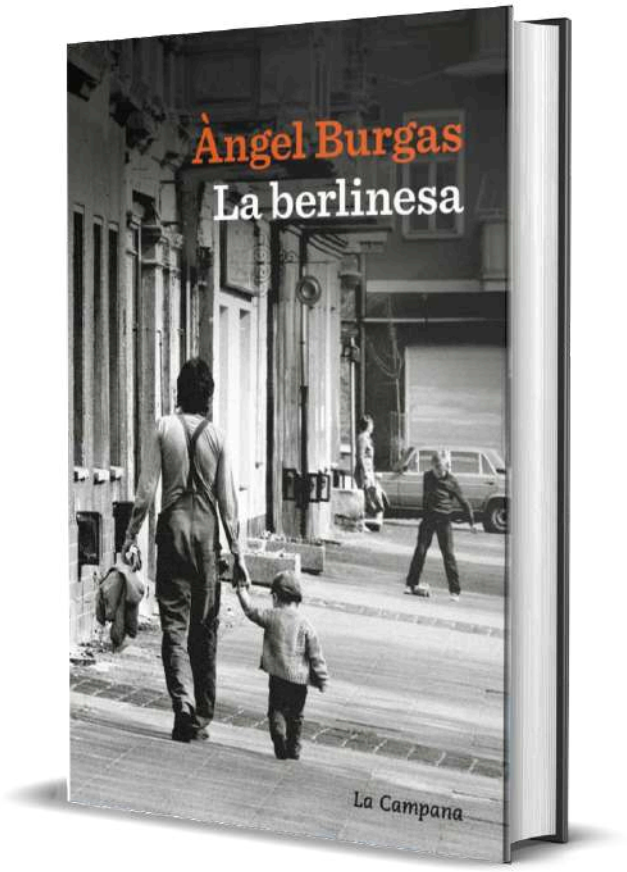
The Berlin Woman

NEW!



A gripping novel blending thriller and coming-of-age fiction, where a family mystery reaches back into the shadows of divided Germany.

Spanning Germany and Spain, a story of identity, memory and buried secrets, haunted by the legacy of the Stasi and the rise of the far right.

Osnabrück, Germany, 1991. Four-year-old Ivan is left with a neighbour for a few hours. His parents never return. Raised in Berlin by his aunt Ursula, he grows up haunted by their disappearance and by one question above all: where is his mother?

His search for the truth takes him across Germany and Spain, uncovering a dangerous past involving Stasi spies, far-right extremists and his father's role in helping people escape East Germany. As Ivan investigates his family's secrets, he must also piece together his own identity.

Can we move forward without knowing where we come from?

The shadows within

Three stories.
Two cities.
No apparent connection.

Fast-paced novel, full of action and with a cinematic rhythm that grips from the very first page.

With a narrative crescendo that never lets up, the novel drives inexorably toward an unexpected ending with a dose of pure adrenaline that will leave you breathless.

A few days after Maia's family witnesses a strange car accident near Bilbao, two media events capture the attention of the city of Barcelona: the disappearance of Elvira Minota, the popular television host famous for having taken part in a musical talent show, and the discovery of a corpse in the home of the prestigious surgeon Jordi Mauler. Three events with no apparent connection, three investigations against the clock where the Mossos and the Ertzaintza will discover that the three cases have more in common than they had imagined.

When the storm fades away

Ernest Prunera

From a young age he always felt the urge to write fiction, something he did in countless notebooks that are now lost. He graduated in Journalism from the Autonomous University of Barcelona and began working in various local and regional media, especially in the written press. She has also developed her professional career in corporate communication and social media management. At the same time, he continued writing, first short stories and, later, longer works. In 2020 he published his first novel, 'L'or del rei' and in 2025 he received the Néstor Luján Historical Novel Award for his book 'Quan s'allunyi la tempesta'.

Winner of the prestigious Nèstor Luján Historical Novel Prize, this work offers a masterfully written and richly detailed narrative grounded in real historical events.

Discover the dramatic beginnings of Catalonia through the eyes of those who shaped it .

Year 843. The Carolingian Empire fractures after the death of Louis the Pious, and conflicts between his heirs shake all of Europe. In the south, the Hispanic March — a frontier land between Christians and Muslims — becomes a contested territory, ravaged by Saracen raids, noble conspiracies, and the ambitions of distant kings.
Amid this turbulent backdrop, where power shifts hands and loyalty is measured by the sword, a young Muslim man struggles not to lose himself. Marwan, the son of a Saracen wali and a lover of books, is forced into war. But after being captured by the Christians, he is named tutor to the eldest son of Count Sunifred, lord of Urgell and Cerdanya. His pupil, Guifré, is a reserved and stubborn boy who will one day be known as Wilfred the Hairy, the legendary father of Catalonia.
In a court divided by intrigue and gripped by fear, Marwan will encounter love and betrayal, and confront the weight of a shadow gnawing at his soul.

A gripping novel set in the foundational years of Catalonia. A tale of power, faith, and identity in the shadow of the Carolingian Empire.

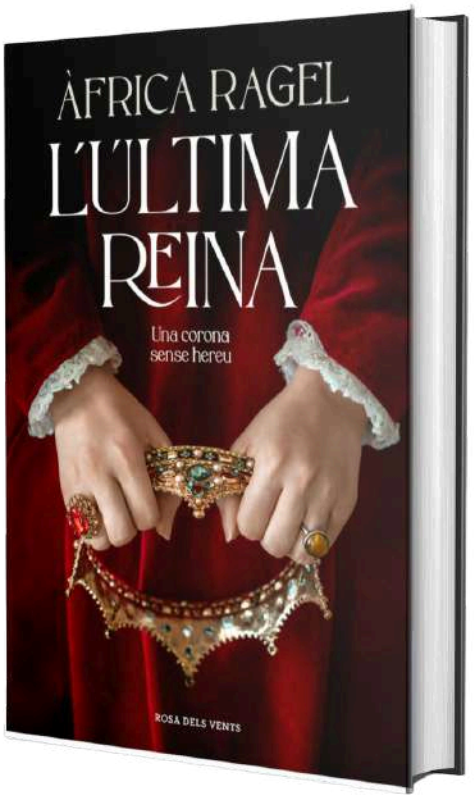
Àfrica Ragel

She's a philologists and has got a master's degree in literary creation. Born in Poblenou, Barcelona, she uses her neighborhood as the scenario for many of her stories.
Her first novel was written at the age of nineteen and since then she hasn't stopped writing, always in search of the unattainable perfection. Some of the literary awards that she has won are the Ciudad de Valencia for her play Átic, the Manuel Cerqueda y Escalder writing award for her novel Els fantasmes de Vilafoscant, among others.
She's a teacher of Catalan studies and literature, and se has five kids who give her enough energy to continue on studying, collaborating with different magazines, and teaching literary creation.

The last queen

Thoroughly documented, this is a fast-paced, emotionally rich and exquisit work of historical fiction.

Àfrica Ragel is a bestselling author in catalan literature, both in her adult fiction and children's literature .



Martin the Humane is an aging king, a widower who has just lost his only son; thus, the House of Barcelona finds itself without an heir to the throne, without income, and with a sovereign stubbornly determined to legitimize his grandson Frederic, an illegitimate heir.

The king's marriage to the young Margarida de Prades seems the only option to save the kingdom, but many have other plans for the future. The new queen is seen by some as part of a necessary political strategy, while others consider her a threat to their interests.

The king, in despair, seeks solutions, and trusts Pere Alamanda to decipher the Libel d'investigació de tresors and uncover the riches the Crown of Aragon has hidden for centuries, so as to obtain the financial support he needs to defend Frederic.

Many will conspire to intervene in the kingdom's future, but Margarida will be the only one to hold it in her hands... and not only through a possible pregnancy.

The life within

A gorgeous portrait of a changing time and a changing city, through the eyes and life experience of a daughter who conquered the world.

The fascinating and unknown story of Esmeralda Cervantes, daughter of the mind behind the current design of Barcelona.

From one of the most celebrated authors in catalan literature.

A portrait of unmeasurable delicacy.

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, Clotilde Cerdà, Clotildina, the fourth daughter of Clotilde Bosch and Ildefons Cerdà, stood out as an exceptional harpist and was a child prodigy. She travelled the world accompanied by her mother and mentor. Over the years, she became a great educator, defender of freedom, feminist, tough, sometimes contradictory, but always truthful and human. It shall rain

Muriel Villanueva

She is the author of more than thirty books of fiction and poetry for all ages. In young adult fiction, she can be found in the novels Duna, Dunes, Rut Sense Hac, Digueu-me Ju and the trilogy L'Esfera. Her work has been translated into Spanish, English, Polish, Portuguese, and Korean, and she has received awards such as the Llibreter Prize, the Critics Award from Valencian Writers, the Carlemany Prize, the Atrapallibres Prize, and the J. M. Casero Prize.

"Senyal que plourà is incredibly precious. Muriel Villanueva does a great job with autofiction; it's super easy to read. Read it wholeheartedly because it is important."

An exquisite work of autofiction by one of the emmerging voices in catalan literature.

A look at one's own life through a literary perspective, with gorgeous prose and skill.

A brilliant work of autofiction. It is a brave and original book, sometimes funny, sometimes painful, and always moving in the truth of its texts. With the ability to stir consciences and a close yet forceful style that has earned her awards such as the Llibreter Prize, the Carlemany Prize, and the Llança de Sant Jordi, Muriel Villanueva now opens the drawers of memories to investigate and question the masculine universe of yesterday and today from an acquired feminist perspective. It is a tableau of experiences and reflections written from maturity, but above all from the depths, by one of the most distinctive voices in contemporary fiction.

A happy ending

Roser Atmetlla

She was born in Blanes in 1963. She has a degree in philosophy. Since 1997 she combines teaching with literary creation.

Although she did not publish her first novel until she was thirty-five years old, at eighteen she already commented that she wanted to be a novelist. The work has been long, as difficult as it is fun ... and essential.

She has always defended that to be a writer it is not necessary to publish. Now she knows. And as she often did the opposite of what she was advised at home, throughout these years she has also tried to ensure that writing does not make her stop reading.

The journey into adulthood through the time span of a single night.

Roser Atmetlla has written a text destined to become a reference, in which the generational portrait is sustained thanks to a fascinating and modern linguistic exploration.

Un final feliç takes place all in one night: it starts at sunset and ends at dawn. Nora invites Sara to a rave: thus begins an unforgettable night of celebration in which love stories, personal and sexual conflicts, and a past that returns in the form of remorse that inevitably leaves a trace of guilt.

Un final felic is the story of sentimental and sexual education in contemporary society, with all its complexities and tragedies, and an unprecedented exploration of the new forms of esteem and relationships of a new generation that struggles to find its place in an increasingly complex and inhospitable world.

Menopause without fear

NEW!

A clear, evidence-based and empowering guide to menopause that challenges the myths surrounding hormone therapy.

Written by a leading menopause specialist with over twenty years of clinical experience.

Hot flushes, insomnia, irritability and other symptoms can have a profound impact on women's lives—but menopause does not have to mean simply putting up with them.
Drawing on over twenty years of clinical experience, gynaecologist Silvia P. González tackles the myths and fears surrounding menopause hormone therapy. With scientific rigour, clarity and humour, she explains how treatments have evolved, why hormone therapy has been unfairly stigmatised, and how the right approach can help women make informed choices and improve their quality of life.

The Story of a Supercentenarian
The Keys to Longevity

NEW!

The extraordinary story of Maria Branyas, who lived to 117 and became the world's oldest living person—and the unique scientific study that sought to uncover the secrets of her exceptional longevity.

A fascinating journey through genetics, lifestyle and healthy ageing, combining cutting-edge science with the intimate portrait of a remarkable life.

Maria Branyas lived to the extraordinary age of 117, becoming the world's oldest living person. During the final years of her life, scientists Manel Esteller and Eloy Santos had a unique opportunity to study her health, habits and lifestyle, while also learning about her memories and outlook on life. Combining their scientific findings with the story of an exceptional woman, this book explores what her remarkable case can teach us about ageing—and how we might apply those lessons to live not only longer, but healthier lives.

What can a 117-year life teach us about living longer—and better?

Peace and war

NEW!

An essential reflection for understanding the reality of europe's relations with the new russia.

Enrique Barón Crespo is ex president of the european parliament.

War and Peace, the title of Tolstoy's magnificent work, inspires this travel book from Madrid to the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR), now aspiring to be a great Russia.

The European Union, having overcome the challenge of changing history on a continent destroyed by world wars, now faces a war of survival. The current challenge is between completing the process of building the European Union as a "European Federation," the goal of the Schuman Declaration, or vegetating under the watchful eye of the neo-tsar Putin. With a division of spheres of influence where the United States has changed priorities and the emerging BRICS powers are demanding a place at the table.

At this new Congress of Vienna, the EU is not invited to the dance and must fight for its survival. The touchstone is the war in Ukraine, the great European plain where the fates of Napoleon and Hitler were decided.

Building peace is the work of weavers: it requires will, skill, and perseverance.

Enrique Barón Crespo

He holds a PhD in Law and Economics from the Complutense University of Madrid. He was a human rights lawyer under Franco's dictatorship, a member of the Spanish Constituent Assembly, a minister in the Spanish government during Spain's accession to the European Community (1982-1985), a Member of the European Parliament (1986-2009), and President of the European Parliament (1989-1992). He is also a Jean Monnet ad personam professor and is currently president of the Yehudi Menuhin Foundation, trustee of Friends of Europe, and vice president of the Dalí Foundation. He speaks seven European languages and is a writer and essayist. His most recent books are El Inquisidor del Anahuac (UNAM), ¿Más Europa? ¡Unida! and La era del federalismo, published by RBA.

Going extinct

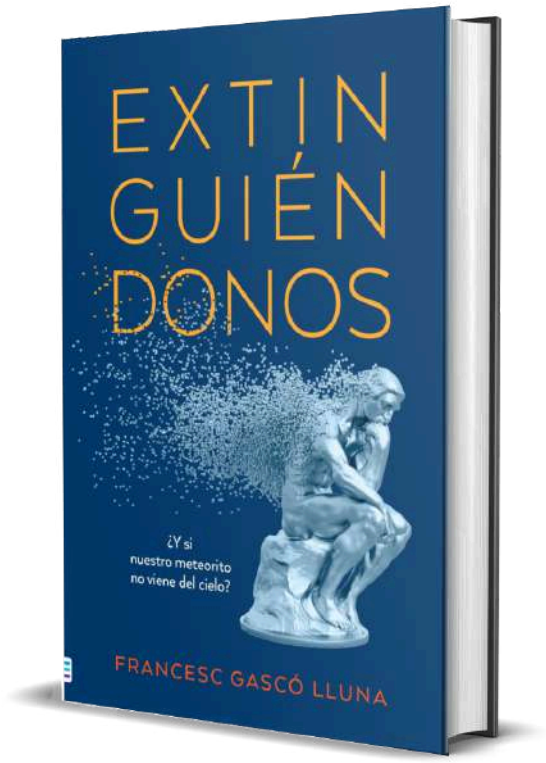
Francesc Gascó Lluna

Francesc Gascó-Lluna is a writer, paleontologist and scientific communicator.
After starting a research career and obtaining a PhD in 2016, he focused to work in scientific communication professionally, both through YouTube and social networks, as well as in more traditional media. In addition to paleontology and scientific dissemination, he is passionate about sports and fantasy and science fiction literature.

Entertaining, accessible, and deeply resonant,

Balances deep reflection with an approachable, witty narrative style that appeals to both casual readers and those seeking meaningful cultural critique

A sharp, witty, and thought-provoking reflection on modern life and the silent collapse of the expectations that shaped an entire generation. From the comfort of our homes and offices, many of us have begun to realize that the formula —study hard, work harder, and success will follow—has quietly expired.
Blending social commentary with surprising parallels to prehistoric eras as distant as the Cretaceous period, Gascó invites readers to question whether humanity has truly evolved or simply traded one form of survival for another. Were we better off in a cave? Perhaps not—but at least we may not have lost our sense of direction quite so dramatically.
Through humor, insight, and bold comparisons between our so-called "civilized" present and our "savage" past, EXTINGUIÉNDONOS explores a society obsessed with immediacy, convenience, and individualism. As the dream of the idyllic life —complete with the perfect house, garden sprinklers, and peaceful morning coffee—drifts further from reality,



Gascó asks a provocative question: what if the meteorite threatening our extinction today is not cosmic, but cultural?

Ephemeral or Immortal?

Arash Arjomandi

Arash Arjomandi is a Spanish philosopher, born in Iran. He holds a PhD in Humanities and is a professor at the UAB, as well as a business consultant. He analyzes current affairs on TVE and writes regularly for the newspapers El País, ABC, and Expansión. He has published several books with renowned publishers.

Rosa Rabanni

Rosa Rabbani is a psychologist who has been recognized by the Generalitat de Catalunya (Catalan Regional Government), having successfully treated more than 2,000 cases. She holds a PhD in Psychology, is the author of several books, and provides training to companies.

It tackles one of humanity's deepest concerns—life, death, and what may endure beyond them—making it relevant across cultures and markets.

It speaks directly to today's global audience seeking meaning, purpose, and emotional resilience in uncertain times.

One question has echoed throughout human history: are we merely fleeting beings, or is there something within us that endures beyond time?
In Ephemeral or Immortal?, Arash Arjomandi and Rosa Rabbani explore five transformative paths that invite us to transcend the apparent limits of our material existence. Drawing from philosophy, spirituality, and scientific reflection, they propose a hopeful and deeply human perspective on life and death—one that shifts the focus from fear of finitude to the possibility of meaning, fulfillment, and inner expansion.
Through clear insights and practical guidance, the authors encourage readers to reconnect with a deeper dimension of themselves, discovering that what appears temporary may, in essence, hold the key to something enduring.

Bárbara Tovar

Bárbara Tovar holds a degree in Psychology from the Autonomous University of Madrid. She specializes in the study and research of how our mind and emotions work, with more than twenty years of clinical practice with adults and adolescents. She took part as a psychologist in the well-known TV program Hermano Mayor on Cuatro. She combines this work with executive coaching and advisory roles in large companies, as well as designing and delivering motivational and emotional growth workshops. She is deeply committed to the importance of caring for mental health, fostering personal development, and growing through the challenges life presents.

Don't run from yourself

A clear and deeply human guide for those living with emotional exhaustion, who have become disconnected from themselves, or who feel they can no longer keep running away.

Far from quick promises or magical solutions, this book invites us to pause, to look at ourselves with greater kindness, and to learn how to hold what hurts without breaking.

There are moments when the body tenses, the mind races, and emotions take over. We feel at our limit, yet we keep functioning. No one taught us how to relate to what we feel—we learned to stay silent, endure, distract ourselves, and keep going even when we can't anymore.

Don't Run from Yourself is born from this common yet rarely named experience. In this book, psychologist Bárbara Tovar, drawing on years of work with people in emotional crisis, invites us to stop escaping our emotions and begin listening to them—not as enemies, but as sources of information about our needs, our history, and our boundaries.

Through real cases, personal experiences, and a warm, honest voice, the author shows how emotions serve a purpose, how the body speaks when words fail, and how resisting what we feel often turns pain into lasting suffering.

Stoic Peace

Miguel Ángel Sandin

He was born in Madrid in 1963. He graduated from the Universidad Complutense and got a degree in philosophy. He worked as an actor and director in Karmesí, a theater company, and also as a literary critic before becoming a professor, work he combines with writing.

Blends philosophy with actionable guidance for everyday life.

Connects Stoic philosophy with the emotional and social challenges of the 21st century.

Written by Miguel Marín Sandín, a seasoned philosopher and author with decades of teaching experience.

An essay that revives ancient wisdom to face today's challenges. After decades as a professor and writer, the author found in Stoicism not just an academic subject, but a vital compass when personal adversity shook his life.

The result is a clear and approachable book that blends rigorous research with lived experience, offering readers practical tools to manage emotions, cultivate serenity, and find meaning in uncertain times.

In a world obsessed with prosperity and fleeting pleasures, Stoic Peace offers an alternative: living with stability, gratitude, and purpose. Free from rigid dogmas or simplistic formulas, this essay shows how the insights of Marcus Aurelius, Seneca, and Epictetus can become a real guide for modern everyday life.

"With clarity, wisdom, and a deeply human voice, Miguel Sandín shows in La paz estoica how ancient Greek philosophy proves useful in modern life—demonstrating that serenity, courage, justice, and wisdom are not abstract ideals, but practical habits that can transform our daily struggles into a fuller, stronger, calmer, and happier existence."

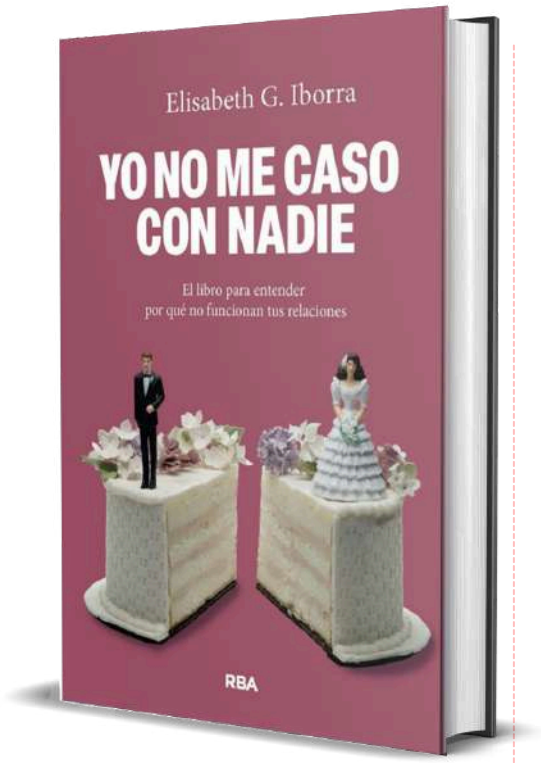
Elisabet G. Iborra

Elisabeth G. Iborra (Zaragoza, 1977) has a degree in Information Sciences and has been writing for national media outlets such as El Mundo, Radio Euskadi, Woman, El Periódico de Cataluña, RNE, eldiario.es, and El Correo, among others, for 26 years. She is the author of more than 25 books, including Anécdotas de enfermeras (Nurses' Anecdotes), Sex Mentiras (Sex Lies), La generación del imposible (The Generation of the Impossible), A ti te encontré en Internet (I Found You on the Internet), Tenemos que hablar (We Need to Talk), and Idealizado estás más guapo (You Look Better in My Mind). She has spent two decades exploring contemporary relationships through sociological research, using an approach that combines rigor and empathy. She is a professor at the Madrid Content School, where she teaches applied creativity and communication strategies.

Appeals not only to singles navigating modern dating, but also to couples questioning traditional expectations, positioning it strongly within the self-development and relationship market.

Elisabeth G. Iborra combines humor, honesty, and social analysis, making complex emotional dynamics accessible and highly readable.

Yo no me caso con nadie by Elisabeth G. Iborra explores how contemporary society undermines our understanding of love and relationships and offers tools to change the way we relate. If you've ever wondered why your relationships falter or why, even when everything seems right, you still feel dissatisfied, this book helps you understand how you got here and what you can do without self-blame — because it's not just you, it's society itself. Drawing on real cases, reflections, and practical advice, with input from psychologist and sexologist Carmen Sánchez and other experts, the book dismantles myths of romantic love, analyzes the social shifts that have transformed partnership, and guides readers toward healthier bonds or a drama-free embrace of singledom. Through direct, humorous insight, it reveals why we idealize love and how to rethink autonomy, intimacy, gender roles, and equality in relationships, helping you live your connections (or your singleness) as you truly deserve.



It taps into one of today's most debated topics: why modern relationships feel harder than ever, and whether traditional couple models still make sense.

The magic of eneagram

Quim Mesalles

Quim Mesalles was born in Barcelona in 1955. He studied drama at the Institut del Teatre de Barcelona and, during his studies, the Stainslavski method was very important for his education. Afterwards he focused on psychology and Gestalt therapy and created his own training in group dynamics following the Gestalt theory, calling it Ludotraining. He later became a trainer and supervisor of Gestalt therapy and specialized in leading therapeutic groups. For twenty years he's been running the Gestalt School Catalunya-Espailúdic where he combines his work as a psychotherapist with training in Gestalt therapy for adults and children, drama therapy, systemic, Enneagram and sex therapy.

Written by one of the leading voices in Gestalt Psychotherapy, Quim Mesalles,

The book is a companion to a deck of cards that unify and compress the Eneagram theory, so that you can access it at any moment and place.

From an integrative perspective, the Enneagram shows us how the adjustments we made in childhood to survive became ways of being in the world—some of which are still active, others no longer necessary.

Through the 55 cards, you can honestly explore both your fixations and your abilities, allowing new possibilities of being to emerge.

This is not a path to label yourself, but an invitation to remember your essence.

What if AI fixed my life?

Unlike tech-heavy AI books, this guide emphasizes emotional, ethical, and psychological well-being—helping readers use AI without losing their identity, purpose, or peace of mind.

As AI rapidly reshapes work and life, this guide offers a timely roadmap to adapt confidently—leveraging AI's power while staying true to your values and unique human edge.

An practical and fun guide to learning how to use generative artificial intelligence in your daily life —without going crazy... or becoming a programmer.

What if you could use AI to simplify your everyday life ?

This book isn't for experts. It's for real people with real jobs, real problems... and a desire for someone—or something—to give them a hand without requiring a master's degree.

A brutally honest manual on how to make the most of generative AI for what really matters: organizing your day, saving time, tackling tedious tasks, boosting creativity, or even better understanding yourself.

With real-world examples, a clear method, and a big dose of humor, the author invites you to live with this new technology fearlessly, authentically, and—above all—without losing your human essence.

Because it's not about letting AI control you. It's about learning to use it... to live better.

Art heists

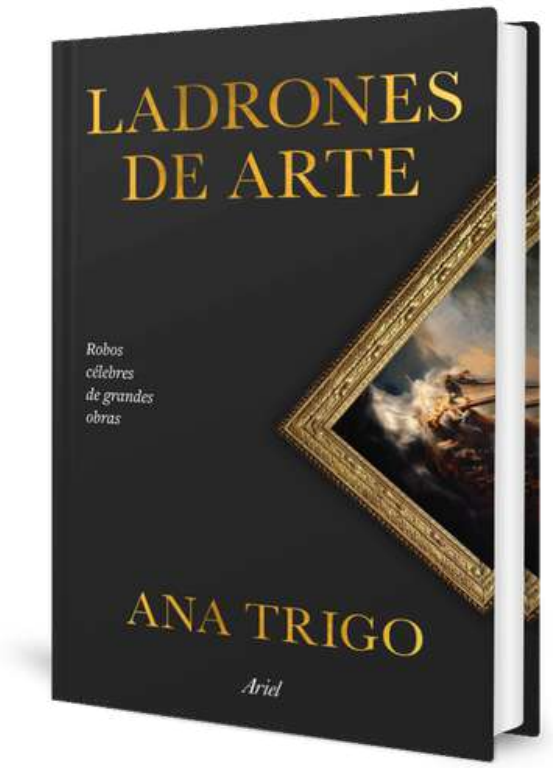
A fast-paced blend of art and history that captures the most gripping elements of true crime at its finest.

Thoroughly documented, offering key insights that help readers grasp both the artistic significance of the stolen works and the true scale of the heist.

Spanning centuries and continents, Art Thieves explores some of the most fascinating and audacious art heists in history — from the tomb raiders of Ancient Egypt to the looters of the Iraq War, from the systematic plunder carried out by the Nazis to the most baffling modern-day thefts. Why is art stolen? Who commits these crimes? And what becomes of these priceless works once they vanish?

This gripping investigation uncovers the hidden world behind stolen masterpieces, diving into legendary cases like the theft of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre, Caravaggio's missing Nativity in Palermo, and the infamous Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum robbery. It also brings to light lesser-known but equally compelling incidents, such as the disappearance of royal treasures from the Prado Museum or a rare Galileo manuscript taken from Spain's National Library.

Blending true crime, history, and art world intrigue, Art Thieves is a riveting read for lovers of culture, mystery, and the irresistible thrill of the chase for lost beauty.



The ultimate chronicle of unsolved art heists, thefts, and the mysteries they left behind.

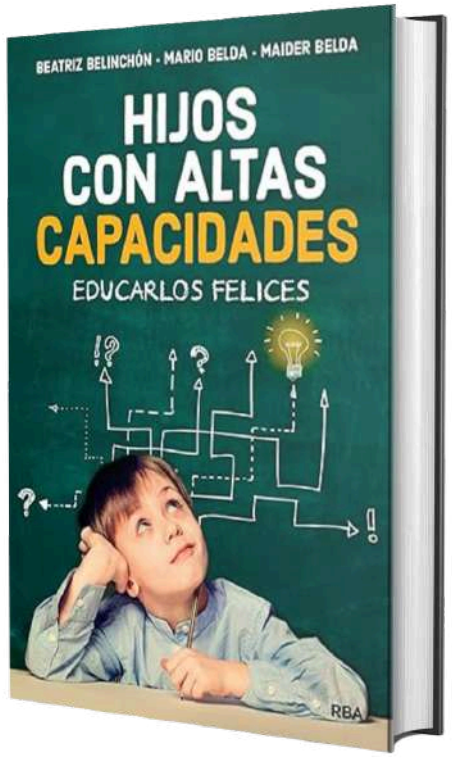
Children with High Abilities: Raising Them Happily

A clear, parent oriented guide.

Full of practical examples.

The goal of the book is to provide parents with the keys to Identifying Gifted Girls and Boys in Order to Educate and Support Them Toward Happiness



We say that a person has high intellectual abilities when they show a natural aptitude for developing talents, skills, or achievements more easily than their peers under the same conditions and opportunities. For this reason, raising boys and girls in a family environment who fit this profile is never a simple path.

The authors of this book, who themselves possess high abilities, offer a humanistic perspective on the process of teaching and supporting these children through the different stages of their growth. Through their explanations and practical proposals, this work aims to be a valuable guide and resource for parents, relatives, and educators. It contextualizes high intellectual ability within settings such as the home or school and also provides advice and guidelines for emotionally connecting with children.

Beatriz Belinchón

is a lawyer specializing in International Law. Creator of the blog Hijos con altas capacidades ("Children with High Abilities"), she shares her experiences with her daughter to raise awareness through everyday stories and help other families in similar situations find their way.

Mario Belda

is a computer engineer and psychologist. His curiosity, drive, and eagerness to learn help him connect with children and adolescents, to whom he strives to pass on his experience. Together with his partner Ainhoa Cano, they form the perfect team when it comes to advising and guiding families with gifted children.

Maider Belda

is a psychopedagogue by profession and by vocation; her goal is to help others. Her story is reflected in these pages, aware of how difficult it is to put into words both her professional experiences and her personal journey.

Get rid of toxics

The ultimate guide to understanding and avoiding the risks of endocrine disruptors

Discover the truth about endocrine disruptors and protect your health.

An essential guide to identifying, understanding, and eliminating the risks of chemical contaminants.

What are endocrine disruptors? How do they work? Why have we been hearing so much about them lately? To what extent can they affect our health—and that of our children? Are companies, institutions, and governments doing enough to prevent us from continued exposure? What can we do ourselves to avoid them and protect our health and our families?

Dr. Nicolás Olea, Professor of Radiology and Physical Medicine at the University of Granada, leads a multidisciplinary group studying environment and health, with a special focus on the relationship between endocrine disruptors and cancer, and is one of the world's leading authorities on the subject. In this book, he offers guidelines to identify chemical pollutants, understand how they work, and learn how to avoid them, while also dispelling false myths and misleading advertising surrounding them. Written as a practical guide, it provides clear recommendations to help eliminate them from our daily lives.

Bibiana Badenes

She was the first physiotherapist in Spain to be trained and certified in the Rolfing® Structural Integration and Rolfing® Movement methods. She also holds certifications in Osteopathic Techniques of Experiential Anatomy, Somatic Coaching, Neuroscience Applied to Bodywork, Aquatic Therapy, and Mindfulness, obtained from institutes in various countries.

Bodily intelligence

The essential manual for everyone with a body.

A practical guide and program to deploy your body's best.

With excercises and a visual map to perform them well

We are all born with bodily intelligence. It is our innate ability to understand and use our bodies effectively, to develop motor skills and body awareness, to express emotions, and to adapt to changing situations. Yet today's lifestyle often disconnects body and mind, leading to harmful habits that affect our posture and our movement potential.

The bodily intelligence program presented by Bibiana Badenes encompasses a wide variety of practices that foster somatic awareness and alignment, with the goal of improving the quality of movement—both physical and emotional. It is an active, simple, and transformative system of body development, inspired by the principles of physiotherapy, the Rolfing method, experiential anatomy, coaching, somatic movement, and dance.

Victor Rioja

Fourth-generation chef of Restaurante Rioja (founded 1924, Benissanó, Valencia), is celebrated worldwide as "the Paco de Lucía of paella." His purist Valencian recipe —highlighted by Spain's postal service and praised by critics, chefs, and gourmets—blends tradition, science, and authenticity, making him a leading guardian of paella's culinary legacy.

The Great (Secret) Book of Paella

Paella is probably the most popular meal in the world. This great (secret) book will allow readers to know it all about their favourite dish.

Written by the best paella cook in the world.

Paella has no official date of birth, no single author, and no "original" recipe. Its true origins remain a mystery. Even in Valencia—the cradle of paella—people don't always mean the same dish when they use the word. Over the centuries, the recipe has shifted and adapted, becoming less of a single plate and more of an idea: a culinary tradition deeply tied to the land, the pan it's cooked in, and above all, to rice.

The Great (Secret) Book of Paella is the life's work of chef Vicente Rioja, who represents the fourth generation of a family restaurant founded more than a century ago in Benissanó, once a vast rice-growing region northwest of Valencia. With the support of experts from the Polytechnic University of Valencia, Rioja has gathered rare historical documents and revealed the secrets of every ingredient and every step of the paella-making process.

His paella blends tradition with science, memory with precision, and, above all, honesty with flavor. This book lays bare the heritage of a dish that, for generations, lived quietly in home kitchens and now stands as a culinary symbol of a people.

Mariona Caldentey: how we changed history

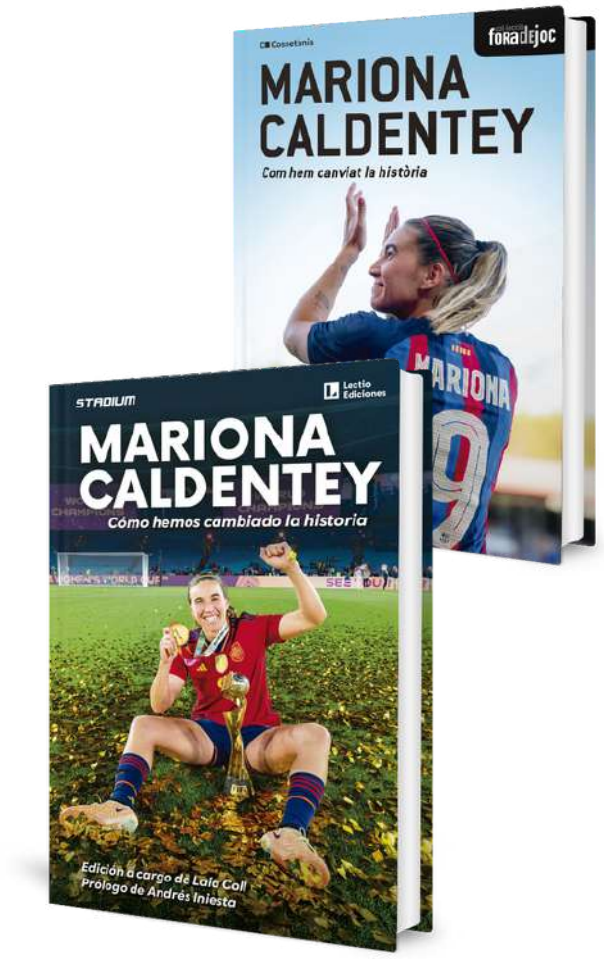
Mariona Cladentey

Mariona Caldentey (Felanitx, 1996) is a player for Arsenal and spent ten seasons wearing the FC Barcelona jersey. She is one of the best footballers in the world — a key figure in the success of both Barça (three-time Champions League winners) and the Spanish national team (World Cup champions). She is part of the generation that has transformed the landscape of women's football.

A deeply personal, first-person account from one of the defining players of a defiant generation.

A leading voice in the revolutionary generation that transformed women's football in Spain and beyond, Mariona offers an insider's look at this historic shift.

In this book, Mariona shares her journey — from her early beginnings and the influence of her father, to her firsthand experience of the rise of women's football. She also speaks openly about the most controversial chapters players have faced in recent years, including the "Las 15" protest, the Oliva agreements, and the Rubiales kiss scandal.



"Winning, improving, always being the best. It's what the club and the badge demand — but it's also what we've always demanded of ourselves. That's one of the keys to everything we've achieved. We were the first to refuse to settle."

Giselfust

The first thing Gisela Navarro (Giselfust) did in life was draw little fish her mother showed her, and soon she was sketching everything she saw. For as long as she can remember, she wanted to study art, and in 2000, she earned a degree in Fine Arts (UB) specializing in image. Shortly after, she completed her first postgraduate program in documentary filmmaking at ESCAC (School of Cinema and Audiovisual Studies).

Around 2012, she began illustrating her first book aimed at an adult audience, followed shortly by her first children's book, both self-published. However, in 2015, she started a postgraduate program in creative illustration at EINA, marking the beginning of her more serious journey in the world of illustration.

Brilliant and forgotten

An exciting journey into the world of the women of the Generation of '27 through the voice of its most universal painter, Maruja Mallo.

The literary debut of Giselfust, a bestselling illustrator

Among all the women artists of the Generation of '27—blurred, erased, and forgotten among the men of that era, often referred to as the Silver Age—shines a vibrant, sparkling, captivating creator of incredible creative complexity and unparalleled artistic talent: Maruja Mallo.

Through the voice and narrative of this universal painter, Brilliant and Forgotten: The Women of the '27 Generation takes us on an exciting journey through the universe of those years of groundbreaking creativity that illuminated the early decades of the 20th century. These female representatives of the time have yet to be adequately recognized and celebrated to this day.

Child emotion - a guide

The author has sold over 30.000 copies of her previous books on parenting and Montessori

A delightful and thorough new look and approach toward emotional upbringing.

This book explores the pivotal role of cultivating emotional intelligence in childhood within the home environment. It proposes that nurturing this skill fosters secure attachment and acts as a lifelong mental health vaccine. Through reflection on mistakes and successes, understanding emotions beyond surface expressions, and meeting emotional needs, the book empowers parents to build resilient emotional foundations for their children.

By prioritizing connection over correction, it advocates for transformative family dynamics without added time or significant changes.

Mamen Jiménez

She's a psychologist, a couple's therapist, an illustrator, an educator and a cheese lover.
She's also the author of three books (for adults and children) and a mother of two. All five deliveries went really well, thank you for asking! Motherhood—hers in particular—was the reason why she decided to start her blog, lapsicomami.com. In this blog, she combined her experience as a mother and a psychologist, drew a bunch of things and tried to do so with a lot of humor—because life is always better when you are having a laugh. That was the timid start of a lot of beautiful things, which have steadily gained more and more importance, especially in social networks like Facebook or Instagram, where a lot of wonderful people read her writings and, more importantly, laugh with her. How funny to live in the 21st century!

With you

Everything you need to know to make your relationship really work.

'With you' answers the questions you can think of and many more, as well as offering a handful of tools and strategies to make your skin glow with love.

You fell in love and there were fireworks and the Berlin Philharmonic played in the background every time you saw each other, but hey, the magic didn't last long, did it? Maybe you don't love each other anymore and it's all going to hell? You thought that love was enough, but eventually there were no more smiles in the mornings, only "Remember to take out the rubbish on your way out".
Loving each other is glory, but for a relationship to work we need to work on it and banish the myths about romantic love that we have heard about after the "ever after" part.

-What do I do if I feel that the other person neither understands nor supports me?
-How do I deal with anger?
-What happens if there is infidelity?
-What if I want to love him/her more, but I "don't feel like it"?
-Why doesn't he/she know what I need, if it is "obvious"?

Having a healthy relationship is possible, and this book will prove it to you.

Blanca Bravo

Born in Barcelona in 1972, she took a doctorate in contemporary Spanish literature. As a researcher, she has been a professor at the University of Barcelona and has participated in numerous national and international conferences and symposiums. She has collaborated in specialized magazines as a columnist, interviewer and monograph coordinator.

She has written a biography of the journalist Carmen de Burgos, she has prepared an edition of the novelist Carranque de Ríos and she has collaborated in the Biographical Dictionary of the Royal Academy of History.

Currently, she teaches permanent teacher training courses at the Official College of Doctors and Graduates of Catalonia and is dedicated to teaching literature at an institute in Badalona. Shee paints watercolors and writes stories and novels.

Suzanne Valadon: look at me

Blanca Bravo creates an exquisite biography of a legendary artist.

There is a moving exhibition about the painter that is traveling the world. First stop: Barcelona and then moving to France.

Wild, voracious, and creative: this was the life of painter Suzanne Valadon. The daughter of a widowed laundress, she did everything before dedicating herself to painting: seamstress, laborer, florist, waitress, acrobat, model... In late 19th-century Montmartre, where women were confined to bourgeois salons or convents, Suzanne defied expectations.

Model to renowned artists like Renoir, Degas, and Toulouse-Lautrec (who gave her the name we know today), she soon became a famous painter herself. Amidst canvases, lovers, and alcohol, she rose from extreme poverty to gain recognition in Parisian art circles and amassed a fortune she spent freely.

A free spirit, restless soul, and brilliant artist, Suzanne took control of her life, often painting self-portraits in search of self-understanding. A controversial mother, devoted daughter, and unforgettable lover, she left an enduring mark, breaking boundaries in her time and becoming a genius for eternity.

Natalia de Barbaro

Natalia de Barbaro is a psychologist, a coach, a columnist and a poet. For many years she has run workshops and worked individually with women who come to her exhausted by playing roles they are forced to play by the strict, patriarchal world. Her authorial Room of One's Own (ref. to Virginia Woolf's book) workshops have become a turning point for many women and marked the beginning of developmental work and introducing life changes.

The kind companion

500.000 copies sold in Poland

International sales for the book sky rocketed due to the unprecedented success in sales and reception in its original publication.

This book owes its existence to stories told by women. Weaved from thousands of women's experiences, from narratives of completely different people, it takes a form of a very personal story of discovery of how deeply we are forged by the patriarchy. It's one of the most important publications written in Poland as part of the #metoo movement, a rebellion against the conservative politics oppressing women, an opposition to sacrificing women's wellbeing in the name of tradition and the existing order. This book is not your usual handbook, it is deeply seated in psychology and feminism, full of the energy of protest. It allows a close look at a contemporary woman – her aspirations, disappointments, desires, needs, her spirituality and corporeality.

Good classes

A book for teachers by teachers that provides insight and resources to develop in class connection with students so that nobody misses out and no minute is considered dull.

José Cabeza

A University Rey Juan Carlos professor, holding a Ph.D. from the Universidad Complutense, with expertise in cinema during the Spanish Civil War. He has contributed to research, taught over 15 courses, and written 19 feature film scripts, one of which became a Netflix movie: "7 años" (Roger Gual, 2016).

Salvador Gómez

Ph.D. in Radio Nacional de España history, professor at Universidad Complutense Madrid. Deputy Director of El Escorial Summer Courses, emphasizes classroom impact.

We admire a novel or a painting for its technique and beauty, but can we feel the same way about a class? The authors of this book emphatically say yes, although they caution against excessive exposure to teaching innovation, which they criticize for being more "innovation" than "teaching." The new can help us improve, but the truth of the profession lies in the old, in what the teacher expects from the students and what the students expect from the teacher.

"How to Give a Good Class" looks at how new digital communicators capture attention, always keeping in mind that an entertaining class is not necessarily a fruitful one. A good teacher needs to cultivate humility, not shy away from or abuse their power, know how to handle rejection, plan times and content well, manage storytelling, and also create a character. However, it's better if it's one that steers clear of romantic clichés like "Dead Poets Society." Here, the authors provide realistic and pragmatic keys (and a bit of mindfulness) to survive the attention dispersion forced by the digital context. There are no miraculous recipes, just one path: "Try. Attempt. Risk. Fail. Be a teacher."

Sara López

Sara López (Barcelona, 1978) has a degree in Medicine from the Autonomous University of Barcelona, specializing in Gynecology and Obstetrics. In the last year of her MIR training she discovered assisted reproduction and fell in love with this field of the specialty. She did her doctoral thesis on diagnostic techniques in fertility.

She is a member of the Spanish Fertility Society and continues her training to keep up to date with the continuous advances in the field of assisted reproduction. After fifteen years of professional experience, she knows that the path for patients is not always easy and that each new pregnancy achieved is a pleasant reward.

I want to get pregnant

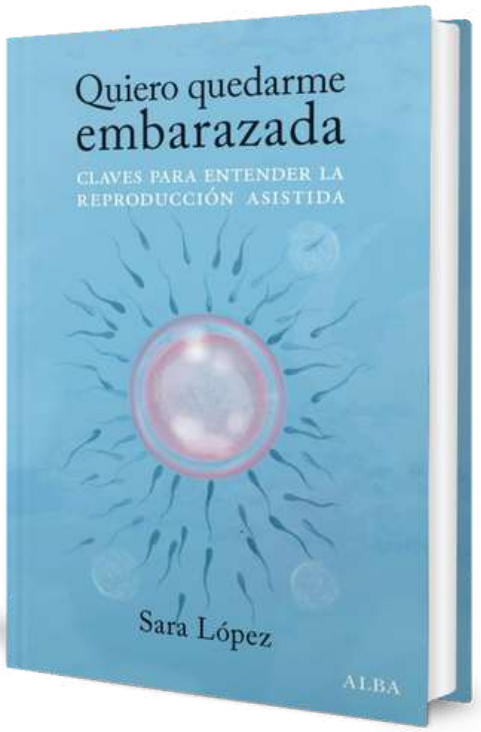
A clear and easy-to-access guide to assisted reproduction.

It includes some real cases with the experiences of many patients

- Did you know that sterility and infertility are not the same thing?
- What is the difference between artificial insemination and in vitro fertilization?
- What tests are requested in a first visit to an assisted reproduction clinic?
- How to eat properly in an assisted reproduction process?
- How to face it emotionally?

Dr. Sara López answers these and many other questions in this book that aims to be a didactic, close and reliable tool for all those people who are starting or have already started an assisted reproduction treatment.

I Want to Get Pregnant covers from the most basic concepts of human reproduction to more complex issues such as the different causes of infertility, the interpretation of the requested tests or the recommended assisted reproduction treatments depending on whether they are aimed at the heterosexual couple, the female couple, the woman without a partner or those women who wish to freeze their eggs.



The perfect companion book for any couple that has started, or is about to start, an assisted reproduction treatment.

Sergi Monrabà Net

(Mosqueroles, 1994), unconditional nature lover and trained sociologist. He spent his childhood together with his brother in the Montseny territory, building cabins and getting lost in wooded areas. At the age of eighteen he embarked on a motorbike trip to Canada, where he worked as a volunteer in ecological farms. This first trip led to others, such as the magical bus trip to Alaska, or the descent of the Yukon River, from which the documentary Yukon the Adventure was later produced.

At the age of twenty-four he graduated in Sociology at the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona where he spent a short period of time working on projects of sociology of religion. However, he soon abandoned his academic career to return home to collaborate with the family business, working as a cook and as a waiter. Nowadays he lives in a cottage in Montseny with his life companion Joana and his animals.

Forested

A story of friendship and overcoming that brings us to the wildest and freest side of the animal world, while reflecting in a critical and local way on the global problems and challenges, such as the climate crisis and globalization.

For readers of Walden

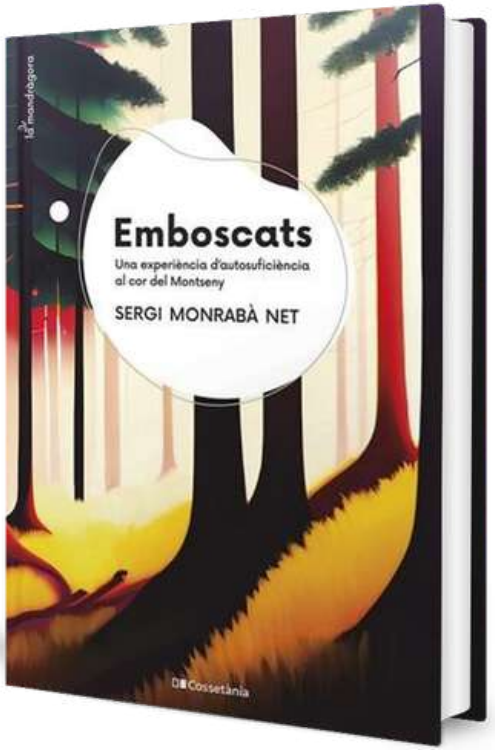
IIn the middle of the pandemic of the covid-19 and in the midst of an unprecedented ecological crisis, four friends decide to temporarily leave the productive round of consumption to go into the forest to experience what it is to live in a sustainable way. To do so, they will spend months studying in depth the fauna and flora of the environment, at the same time they will build a wooden cabin in a hidden corner of the Montseny (one of the prominent mountains in Catalonia) that will serve them as a shelter. Their aim is to survive by using only the food resources that the forest provides them with: plants, trees, fruits, etc.

The author not only describes the stay in the forest, but also the months of preparation and all the factors that were taken into account to make this experience a reality. - Throughout the book, Monrabà reflects on different topics: the consumer society, materialism, the passing of time, the supremacy of the human being, the climate crisis...



"This book is born from the will to give answers to all those questions that our neighbors and friends asked us when we came back from our stay in the forest, both those of a more pragmatic nature and those more transcendent questions".
Sergi Monrabà on the book.

Curiosity guide for Barcelona

Joan de Déu Prats

Before entering the world of children's literature, he worked as a satirical journalist and television scriptwriter. He has published more than 70 books for children and young adults, as well as a travel book, "Terra de Castells" (Ed. Barcanova). He has been awarded several prizes, notably the prize for children's literature, which he has won twice, presented by the Sant Joan de Déu Hospital in conjunction with La Galera publishers and Círculo de Lectores. He also won the competition for short stories held by the Cavall Fort magazine, the Serra d'Or for best children's book of 2004 with "Cuentos de fantasmas" (Editorial Timun Mas) and was a finalist in the children's and young adults literature competition by Barcanova with "Nàufrag". For Joan de Déu Prats, "writing is like playing with words, and the aim is to help people dream, through imagination, because the only way to solve life's challenges is with some imagination".

More than 200 curiosities divided by six different eras, plus an epilogue with the main streets, popular names, Barcelona sayings, the origins of the neighborhoods, etc.

How many things attract our attention or arouse our curiosity about Barcelona and we don't know the answer! Finally, we reveal the unknowns! Why do they call it Can Fanga? Why do we say merci? Why are the cabs black and grey? What is a pixapins? And a camacu? Where is Can Seixanta? What is the Oucomballa? What does Boqueria mean? And Rambla? Who was Mortiz? And Damm? Why is the Barça shirt blaugrana? Who invented Juanola pills? Why do we like so much the vermouth? Did Bufallo Bill or Albert Einstenin visit Barcelona? Why was the city the Rosa de Foc? Is it false the Gothic Quarter? Why did we live by the sea? Why is it necessary to bomb Barcelona every fifty years? Why do tourists buy Mexican bars? Are there other Barcelones in the world? From these revealed anecdotes, this book proposes an agile and enjoyable journey through the history of the city. So that you do not remain without answers.

Barcelona like you have never seen it before! Enjoy the city from a brand new perspective.

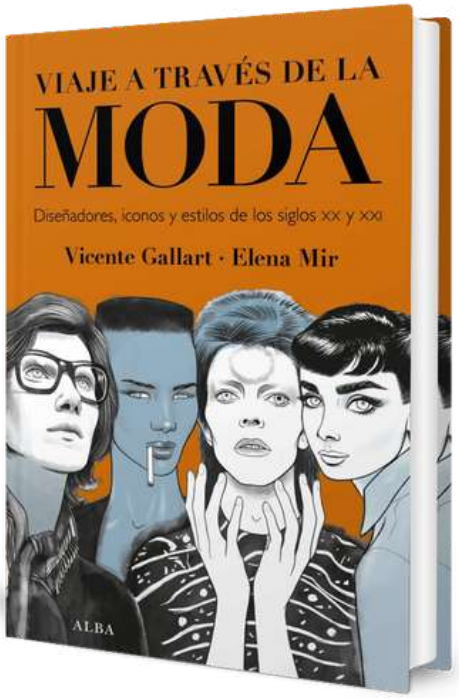
A journey through fashion

Vicente Gallart is an expert in fashion and has long collaborated with magazines and all sorts of media commenting and talking about it.

His is a view that looks at things from experience, understanding and perspective.

The 20th century saw the most radical revolution in fashion, which went from being the exclusive patrimony of an elite to being part of the lives of many of the inhabitants of the planet. Until reaching the total democratization that we live in today, there has been a process in which this artistic and creative discipline has been gaining greater social importance and greater media impact.

A journey through fashion travels, decade after decade, the past twentieth century and the first two decades of the twenty-first century from a historical, social and economic perspective, discovering the different styles of each era. The objective is to detail the distant and recent past of fashion through its styles, designers and icons. In this intense journey, art, theater, dance, cinema, music and television are making an appearance to form, with fashion, a fascinating tandem that has reached the present day since 2001.



A beautiful and very well knitted journey through the last centuries of fashion through the icons and big names that have historically accompanied high coture

Neurosciences and education for Peace. Her essays, which are required reading in academic fields, have been translated into Chinese, Polish, Portuguese and Italian.

Her inspiring TEDx talk, "Wake up children's social brain and you will awaken their talents," has made her a global benchmark on how to effectively educate for happiness.

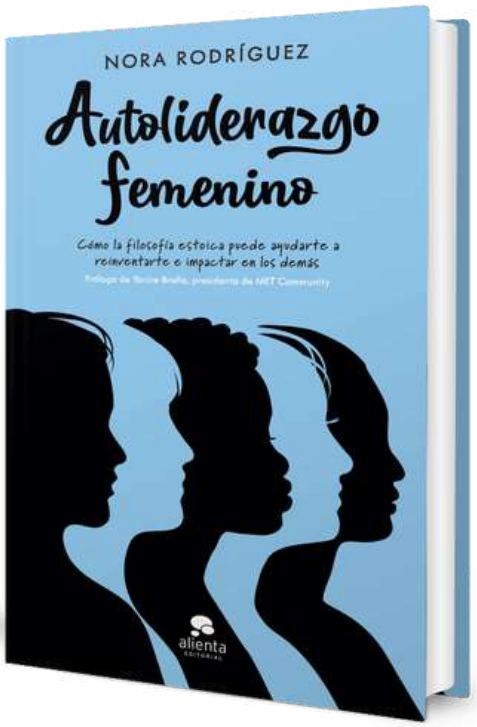
Femenine self-leadership

Nora Rodriguez teaches us how to develop female self-leadership centered on the person: a leadership in tune with our values, skills and talents that will allow us to achieve a transformative role and impact our environment in a positive way. Be part of the change!

Something is changing in our society, but we're in an early stage of that change. During the pandemic in 2020, seven women leaders made exemplary decisions in critical times, and every one of them, with a personal ethical vision, prioritized common welfare, and a sense of justice.

The main challenge for our society is developing a new style of feminine leadership. Nora Rodríguez, who has a lot of experience in mentoring leaders, states that there are still millions of feminine leadership styles to practice and expand. But for that to happen we will have to unblock the barriers that prevent women's progress, shatter prejudices, and overcome gender stereotypes.

With this book we will understand how and why stoic philosophy allows us to overcome thinking based on individualism and exclusion so as to approach a more inclusive style to build a society that is more ethic, supportive and sustainable. And that can only be achieved by including women.



The first book in the world about femenine leadership built upon the principles of stoic philosophy.

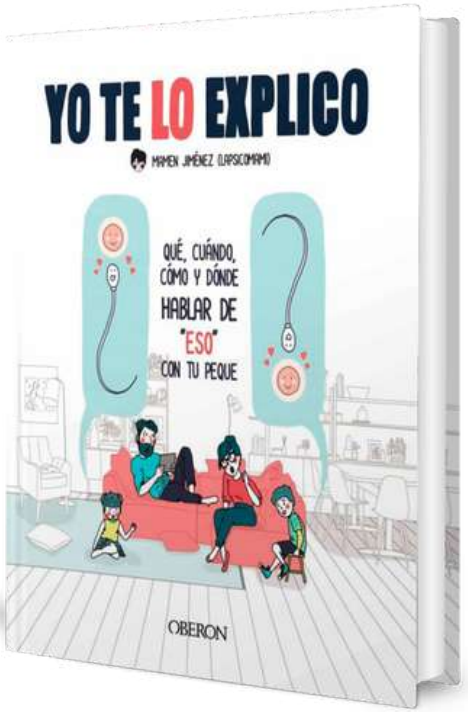
I can explain it!

The author is a well-known blogger, psychologist, sexologist and couple therapist.

This book is the result of everything the author has gathered in her workshops with families over the years, of the consultations she has received and of course of an exhaustive documentation work.

One day you're happily making your little one and suddenly, a few years after, the child himself is asking the details of the process. Is the child too little to be given such explanations? Am I giving him ideas or more information than the one he needs? What happens if he touches himself? Mamen Jiménez, psychologist, sexologist and couples therapist, explains everything clearly - and with a bit of humor- so that you can tell all of it to you little one and accompany him in his affective and sexual development with naturalness, no shame and without panicking when he asks you certain questions. In this book you will find the answers to his questions as well as yours, and a series of resources to deal with this topic at home, together.



Hilarious and well explained throught funny illustrations.

Antoni Batista

He is Doctor in communication sciences. Journalist, writer, musicologist. Professor at the Faculty of communication sciences of the Autonomous University of Barcelona and the University Rovira i Virgili of Tarragona.

He majored in journalism in conflict situations, in particular in the cases of Israel/Palestine, Ireland and the Basque country, has written six books on the subject, as did the research doctorate and participate regularly in seminars and conferences. Co-directed with Dr. Antoni Segura annual seminars at the University of the Basque conflict.

He has been director of analysis and Strategy of the Department of the Presidency of the Generalitat de Catalunya (2003-2006), director of communication at the Institut Ramon Llull (2006-2008) and director of communication of the Gran Teatro del Liceo (2008-2009).

God's spokesmen

A thorough look into the power of words, communication and the greatest campanign in human history.

Through the chronicle, the essay and the "journalism of the experience", the book delves into the gospels and proposes an innovative interpretation, bold and suggestive from the point of view of the theory of communication.

The propagation of the Christian message is one of the most remarkable marketing campaigns in the history of humanity. If the will of Jesus was eminently communicative, and if the apostles, by putting their message in writing, widened the receptive audience -the media share-, everything indicates that the resources of modern communication science can help us to shed light on one of the most spectacular initiatory episodes of Western culture. Using the tools of semiotics, discourse analysis and the theory of journalism, Antoni Batista approaches the biblical texts and invites us to reflect, with joy and dynamism, on the relationship between the prophets and the evangelists (the editorial staff of a great means of communication) and the voice that awaits them in the transmission of the message (God, the Editor).

Beatriz M. Muñoz

HShe is mother of three children - four, very soon- Montessori Assistant (Casa de niños - AMI), Infant Community Montessori Guide (MEPI) and Parent/Classroom Positive Discipline Educator Positive Discipline Trainer Candidate) certified by the PDA (Positive Discipline Association).

She is passionate about helping kids and adults to embrace respectful, horizontal, encouraging relationships. In 2013 she started her blog, www.tigriteando.com, a place where to share with other parents the educational activities she was experiencing with her daughters. Since then, she is been spreading her view about Montessori at home, Positive Discipline and Respectful parenting in workshops and online courses at Montessorízate!

Raising from the heart

A practical and dynamic book on parenting through Montessori told from experience and from a widely celebrated author.

After the success of their previous books, Beatriz M. Muñoz and Nitdia Aznárez, bring Raising from the heart, a family guide to educate in a more conscious way, through the symbiosis of Montessori, positive discipline and the connection with oneself and nature.

In this new approach, they offer tools and respectful solutions for our little ones to be more autonomous and responsible, and especially for each member of the family to find their place, so that they grow up feeling seen and loved unconditionally. For this, it is necessary that adults also cultivate the connection with their inner child, because if we want to face the daily challenges and needs of our sons and daughters with honesty, we will have to start by taking care of and understanding ourselves. With this comprehensive manual, we will learn how to leave behind punishments, rewards and all practices that do not cultivate unconditional love, and how to build a safe, encouraging, and calm family environment for our children, from early childhood to adolescence, without losing the focus of compassion and benevolence towards ourselves.

Methodology for screenwriting

Tomás Aragay

(Barcelona, 1968) is a choreographer and scriptwriter. He studied drama and stage direction at the Institut del Teatre de Barcelona. In 1996 he founded with Roger Bernat the creation center General Elèctrica in Barcelona and, in 2001, together with Sofía Asencio, he started a new creative adventure, the Societat Doctor Alonso.

With Cesc Gay he has shared a career as a screenwriter in films such as Krampack (2000), En la ciudad (2003) and Ficción (2006). He has taught screenwriting at ESCAC since 2001.

A rich and entertaning introudcition to screenwriting, that allows readers to understand the process of creating a story through visual media.

Tomás Aragay is one of Spain's most celebrated and awarded screenwriters, having won multiple awards in his career.

Truman* won Best motion Picture and Best writing at the Goya Awards. It was cowritten by Aragay.

This book proposes a personal approach to the complete process of writing a solid, complex, formally powerful film script that also reflects a distinct voice of its own. With his extensive experience in the field of teaching and writing workshops, Tomás Aragay exposes in a clear, orderly and pedagogical way the tools, questions and devices that constitute the methodology for writing a screenplay. Through a conscientious analysis of two award-winning films of high value (Truman, by Cesc Gay, whose script he co-authored, and Plácido, by Berlanga), Método para escribir un guión is a useful text for beginners and students as well as for professionals who want to revise their way of working. And also for any amateur who is interested in understanding the ins and outs of screenwriting.
